Top Tips for your Personal Statement

In the UK, applications to university are 1) on a form to UCAS (Universities and Colleges Admissions Service). As well as personal and course details, you will need to write a personal statement that explains why you want to 2) the courses you have applied for. If you write a good personal statement, you will impress the university and hopefully be 3) an offer if you have the potential to meet the entry requirements and 4) well on the course.

Follow these tips from the UCAS when writing your personal statement:

- 5) some research before you start filling out your UCAS form. Have you decided which courses to take and which universities you are applying to?
- Be transparent: why are you 6) these choices?
- Show motivation and enthusiasm for the subject you want to 7)
- Demonstrate that you are mature and responsible and can 8) things independently.
- Structure the material: the majority (50-75%) of your personal statement should be spent explaining why you want to 9) the course.
- Show knowledge of, and interest in, the subject.
- Include details of jobs you have 10)
- Mention projects you have 11) and responsibilities you have had.
- Also mention any career plans and gap year plans you have 12)

TOP TIPS:

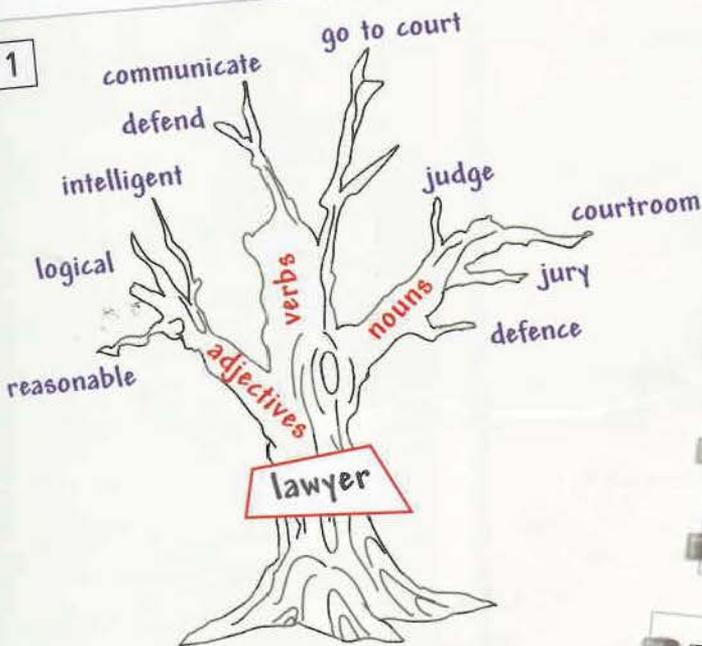

Choose a sensible email address for your UCAS form. Universities are not aware of the other choices you have 13) You only write one personal statement for all 5 universities you are applying to, so ensure it is general enough to apply to each course you want to 14)

3 Look at these four different images from vocabulary notebooks. Which image(s) 1, 2, 3 or 4:

- 1 list collocations.
- 2 uses visuals to remember words.
- 3 groups words connected to a topic.
- 4 notes grammar information about the words.

Think about how these notebooks compare to yours.

GRAMMAR FOCUS: Present Simple/Continuous – Present Perfect – Present Perfect Continuous

1 Complete each gap with the correct form of the verb (present simple/present continuous) in brackets.

Facebook is one of the most addictive social phenomena to have ever swept the world! Over 500 million of us now use the site.

Here's how to recognise that you

1) (have) an addiction ...

One of the earliest signs of addiction is changing your profile picture over and over again. It 2) (mean) that you 3) (worry) about your image far too much.

Also, if you 4) (change) your status update more than once an hour then take a long hard look at yourself.

5) anyone really (need) to know that you 6) (now/make) a cup of tea? Or that you 7) (think) about buying a newspaper, or are on Facebook. No. They don't.

If you have ever needed to be on Facebook so much that you tried to access it via a mobile phone, then you 8) (need) to have a word with yourself.

Another sign you 9) (be) addicted is what is called 'profile rash': putting applications like Scrabulous, Super Wall, Zombies or Videojug all over your page. Get rid of them, even if you think they 10) (look) super cool.

It's also not a good sign if facebook 11) (start) to take over your vocabulary. If you 12) (say) things like "I'm going to do some facebooking" or "I'll facebook you about that later," then you simply 13) (have) to get a grip and try spending more time with your friends. No, not your Facebook friends! Your real ones who 14) (inhabit) the real world.

4 You will hear an announcement giving advice to first time flyers. Listen and complete the gaps.

Arriving at the airport

Airports, especially large ones, can seem very confusing for a first-time 1) Do not worry; when you learn the routines, you will be fine. There are many things to do at airports but remember your most important goals: checking in, entering the security area and 2) the plane.

Arrive in good time at the airport

Everything takes time at the airport: 3), security 4), shopping, eating, whatever. Your 5) can tell you when to arrive at the airport (usually 1 hour before the plane leaves). As a first time traveller, you should arrive half an hour or an hour before the recommended 'latest time'.

Arrive at the right terminal

Larger airports have many 6) and quite often, the distances between them are long. It's important to 7) at the right terminal. Your travel itinerary usually says what terminal your plane will 8) from. If you're unsure, contact the airport, your travel 9) or your airline.

Have your travel documents available

You need to present your travel 10) frequently at the airport. Important travel documents might be: 11) or other identification, tickets (if you have 12) tickets), 13) card (given to you at 14)) and your travel itinerary (not important but very useful).

Navigate yourself

When you arrive in the 15) area, your first mission is to find your check-in 16) Some airports have 17) showing what desk you should 18) at, while at other airports you will have to look for your airline's notice 19) If you arrive early and can't find where you need to check-in, it might be that the check-in for your route has not started. You may also need to 20) if there are a lot of people travelling, so do get to the airport in plenty of time.

- 9 Buildings made of stone are often cool in summer and warm in winter.
- 10 Some people travel all over the world to watch particular sport.
- 11 Arranging my journey was quite difficult business.

3 Complete these sentences with the best word from the box below.

- many • a lot of • enough • a/an • a few
• much • the • some (x2) • any

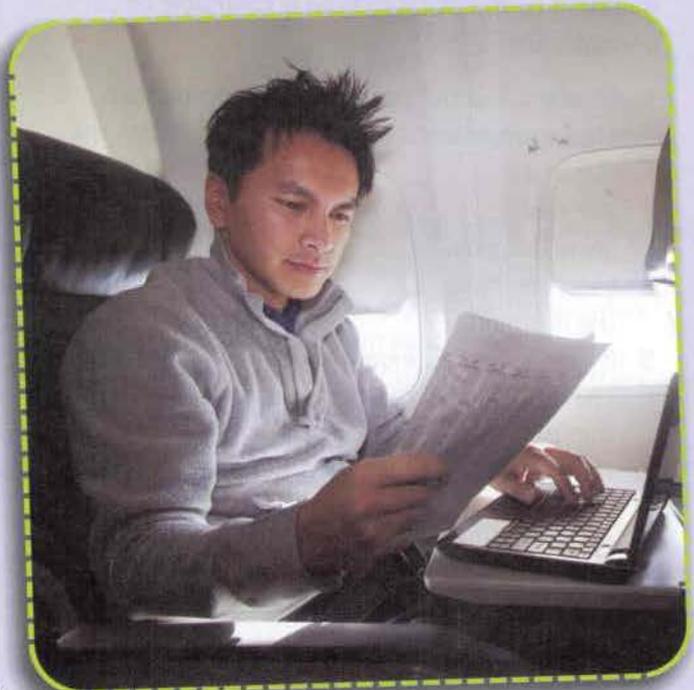

- 1 Could you lend me money for the bus fare?
- 2 Credit cards are useful because you don't need to carry cash around with you – except for small things like bus trips.
- 3 It would be much quicker to take tram.
- 4 My train arrived just minutes late.
- 5 Hurry up. We don't have time left, only 10 minutes.
- 6 I had just time to go through duty free before I boarded the plane.
- 7 There were so passengers already on the bus that we couldn't get on.
- 8 Nowadays people prefer travelling by train rather than by plane – trains are getting really popular.
- 9 I have coins but I don't think I've got enough for the machine.
- 10 There was extra long queue at check-in when I arrived.

4 Here is some air travel advice for what to do on board a plane. Complete the blanks with a/an, some, -, the. Sometimes more than one answer is possible. Why?

Airline attendants are on board to make your flying experience 1) positive one. Listen and be alert to any instructions from the pilot himself or 2) attendants. Pay attention to information. You'll see the attendants when you board the plane and they will serve you drinks, 3) snacks and/or meals during your flight. They are there to offer you 4) assistance if you need it. They will show you safety flight instructions so pay 5) close attention, and don't be afraid to press the call button if you need an item like 6) blanket or pillow. Take every opportunity to make yourself comfortable so that you can relax and enjoy the flight.

7) flights, usually overseas flights, show in-flight movies. Watching these can make your 8) time on board pass by more quickly. 9) reading material is also a good way to pass the time while flying. 10) people even take their laptops on board. Bring whatever makes you feel comfortable, but do not overpack your carry-on luggage. Most often, you will be restricted to two bags for 11) carry-on luggage. Bring any necessary medications, perhaps a change of clothes for long flights, things to do during 12) flight, necessary items if travelling with children, and snacks. Pack carefully, choosing only 13) necessary items and it will make your trip much easier. Your goal is to fly comfortably, and 14) excess baggage can become a burden.

A The discovery of two partial skeletons in an underground cave in South Africa has excited the scientific world. The skeletons belong to an adult female and a young male probably aged 11 or 12. The skeletons were found lying side by side. They are believed to be over 1.9 million years old. The skeletons are of particular interest as they are believed to belong to a species of mankind as yet undiscovered.

E The findings suggest that while weight training has become increasingly popular in recent years it has been accompanied by a marked increase in the number of injuries caused by such training. The findings are part of a study of injuries treated in hospital emergency departments over an 18 year period.

B The 'barometer of life' project aims to document a much wider and more in-depth set of findings on the range of living species, including mammals, birds, fish and plant life. It will provide experts with an accurate picture of which species are at risk and require urgent protection. It is thought that to date only about one quarter of species have been assessed in this way.

F It had been thought that child development followed a fairly fixed pattern, with skills and characteristics developing at approximately the same time in children all over the world. However, recent studies conducted in countries in several parts of the world call this belief into question. Children under 14 regularly carry out tasks such as care giving and using knives – activities which in the US are not seen until much later in a child's development. This suggests that development may be influenced at least in part by societal factors.

C Volcanic vents, known as 'black smokers', are found on deep sea beds and get their name from the black volcanic rock these chimney-like structures are made of. They are found at an average depth of 2100 meters. But now a British scientific expedition using a remotely controlled diving vehicle has found them a full half a mile deeper than before – at 5,000 m (3.1 miles) below the ocean's surface. The smokers were found in the Cayman Trough in the Caribbean by the Royal Research Ship 'James Cook'. The chimneys are formed when super-heated water breaks through vents in the earth's crust. The minerals found in the water collect round the vents and over time build up into chimney-like structures.

G A process that used to take three weeks can now be done in 24 hours, speeding up estimates of the heat and volume of lava escaping from erupting volcanos. Sensors positioned on the ground communicate with satellites. When the satellite registers abnormal activity, it can programme itself to focus on that activity and send alerts to ground-based scientists. This development, recently used to monitor Iceland's now infamous Eyjafjallajökull, should allow for the adoption of much earlier emergency measures.

D A collection of five articles recently published in the Scandinavian Journal of Medicine & Science in Sports sets out the positive effects on the body of playing football. These include increased muscle strength and bone mineral density, and improved reflex response and postural balance. These effects are seen after regular participation in football and are linked to the prevention of bone fractures.

Contagious yawning 'shows more empathy with other people's feelings'

A People who yawn when they see someone else yawning are more in touch with the feelings of others, scientists say. Participants in a study who scored highly in tests of empathy, yawned contagiously (i.e. in response to someone else yawning) more than three times as often as those less sensitive to others' emotions.

B It has been suggested that yawning increases blood flow and oxygen levels in the brain, helping to keep us alert. This may explain why yawning is often seen when people are waiting for something stressful to happen, such as in athletes just before an event or in students prior to exams.

C Scientists have suggested yawning might be contagious because humans once lived, like chimpanzees, in groups and it was used either as a way to coordinate sleeping or to raise alertness levels in times of danger.

D Dr Catriona Morrison, a cognitive psychologist at the University of Leeds, decided to test the theory of a link between yawning and sensitivity to others' emotions with an experiment involving 40 psychology students and 40 engineering students. The participants, half of whom were male, were made to sit in a small room facing a person who yawned 10 times in 10 minutes.

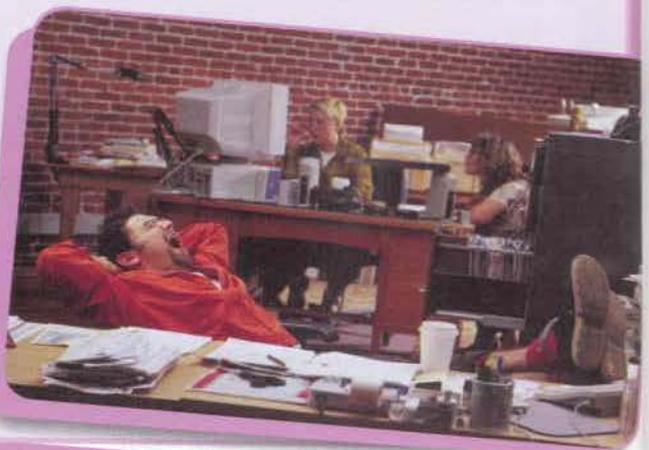

E The participants, who believed they were waiting for an experiment to start, did not know they were being monitored. Around a third of those taking part did not yawn at all. On average, the engineers yawned only 1.5 times and the psychologists 5.5 times.

F In the study, participants also took part in a 'theory of mind' test. This involved being shown pictures of people's eyes and being asked to describe their emotional states. From a maximum of 40 points, the psychologists scored on average 28, and the engineers got 25.5.

G The researchers found those with high theory of mind scores yawned the most. They were surprised to find that while women are generally considered more empathetic than men, there was no difference between the sexes during the experiment.

H Dr Morrison said: "We worked with psychologists because they are widely considered to be more empathetic, and engineers, because they are often seen as 'systemisers' i.e. people who are more interested in objects and functions than people. We found the psychologists yawned contagiously more than the engineers. This suggests they have more social awareness. The theory is that we yawn contagiously to show empathy and the evolutionary explanation is that it is a warning to the group that we need to be more alert."

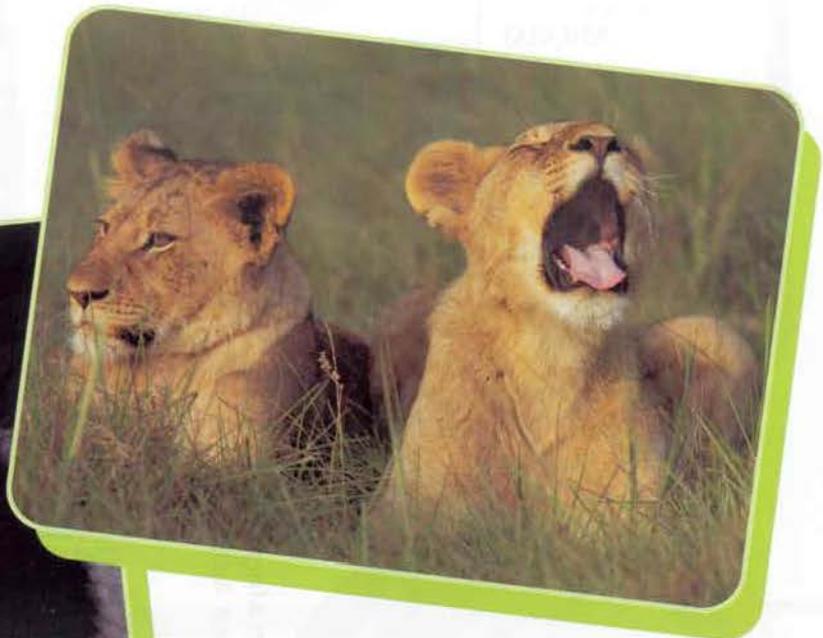

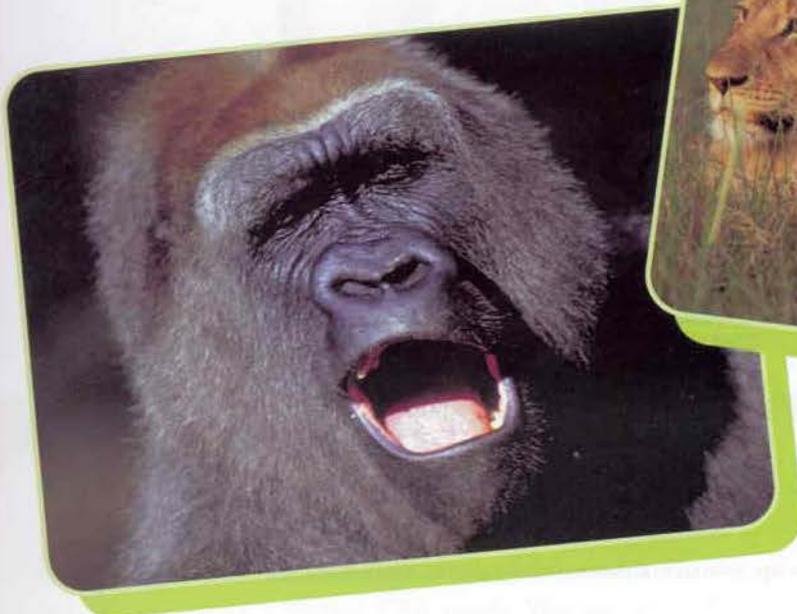

I Many animals, including fish, birds, cats and crocodiles, yawn. However, only humans, chimpanzees and possibly the macaque monkey yawn contagiously. Studies have found that between 40 and 60 per cent of adult humans

Average Life Expectancy 2010

The average life expectancy in the United States is projected to be 78.3 for the year 2010, but don't start planning your retirement years just yet. Many factors may determine your longevity, some of which you may find 1) surprising/surprisingly.

Average Life Expectancy Male Vs. Female

Females tend to outlive males by an average of five to ten years, and have been doing so 2) consistent/consistently for quite some time now. There isn't a single year since 1960 that men have taken the lead on that average, or even come 3) close/closely (though the gap does seem to be 4) slow/slowly closing). The estimated life expectancy for a man in 2010 is 75.7 years old, while for women it's 80.8. Why is that?

One reason may be that men tend to participate in 5) riskier/riskiest behaviours more often than women, since they can be more 6) aggressive/aggressively in nature. Violence and accidents are more 7) common/commonly among the male gender than female, as are 8) unhealthy/unhealthily behaviours like smoking, drinking 9) excessive/excessively, and drug use. One study of male mice also suggests that sperm genes are to blame – male mice sacrifice longevity for 10) more big/bigger bodies and 11) greater/greatest energy output required for breeding. It's also proven that women's hearts keep their pumping power 12) much/more longer than men's hearts do.

Average Life Expectancy by Country

Being American does not guarantee living 13) longer/lengthy. In fact, the United States has dropped 14) dramatic/dramatically from 24th in the world for life expectancy in 1999, to 49th in the year 2010. The reason? Critics say health care is the 15) primary/primarily cause. Though Americans spend more on health care than any other industrialised country, uninsured citizens are 16) continual/continually on the rise. The American lifestyle isn't exactly the 17) healthier/healthiest either: smoking, obesity, traffic accidents, and homicides also have been increasing 18) steady/steadily in the United States.

In which countries do people live the 19) longer/longest? According to the CIA's World Fact Book, a little southeast Asian country called Macau 20) narrow/narrowly takes the top spot, with citizens living an average of 84.36 years. The top ten countries with the 21) higher/highest average life expectancy for 2010 are as follows:

- | | |
|--------------|-----------------|
| 1. Macau | 6. Australia |
| 2. Andorra | 7. Canada |
| 3. Japan | 8. France |
| 4. Singapore | 9. Sweden |
| 5. Hong Kong | 10. Switzerland |

The United States, at 49th, rather 22) interesting/interestingly, is sandwiched between Wallis and Futuna and Albania. Zambia and Angola come in last – numbers 223 and 224 23) respective/respectively, with average life expectancies of 38.63 and 38.2.

How Long Will You Live?

Though gender, race, and country all play a role in longevity, much of the future is still in your hands. Making wise, healthy lifestyle choices is 24) complete/completely in your control and will 25) significant/significantly impact on the length and quality of your life.

5 Complete the gaps in this article giving advice to students on what to bring to college. Use the correct form of must, have to, need.

You'll soon 1) start thinking about packing your bags for college. But packing them with what? Many first year students arrive at the dorms carrying huge boxes and suitcases only to discover that they've brought stuff they 2) By bringing the right items with you, you'll get a good start to the year and you 3) worry about running around buying things.

Stuff for Your Room

Call the housing office beforehand and find out how big your room is and what it comes with. Also check whether you 4) pay a deposit. Not all places have elevators, so it's better to pack a lot of smaller boxes that one person can handle. This way you 5) strain yourself getting things to your room. You should bring:

- comforter/bedspread;
- pillow;
- bed linen (you'll 6) check what size bed you have);
- clothes hangers
- coffee mug;
- drinking cups, dishes and silverware for snacks;
- poster putty (in case you 7) hang things up).

Don't Bring It

As for what NOT to bring, you should contact your housing office and ask about the rules and regulations within the residence halls. There are numerous items that you 8) bring as colleges don't allow you to use them:

- halogen bulbs and/or lamps (you 9) have these as colleges provide replacements);
- hotplates, toasters, toaster ovens;
- air conditioners;
- extension cords;
- candles;
- pets, waterbeds, nail picture hangers.

You might want to contact some students currently in your future college and ask them what you 10) bring. Write up a checklist a few weeks before you begin packing and add to it as things occur to you.

6 Write six sentences describing the obligations, requirements, necessities, things that are forbidden, unnecessary or not required in the place where you live/a place where you have lived. Be ready to discuss these in class.

SKILLS FOCUS

Chimps pass on gadget use like humans

Chimpanzees readily learn and share techniques on how to fiddle with gadgets, new research shows – the best evidence yet that our closest living relatives pass on customs and culture just as humans do.

The new findings help shed light on the capabilities of the last common ancestor of humans and chimps. And the research could also help develop better robots and artificial intelligence, the researchers say.

In the wild, chimpanzee troops often are distinct from one another, possessing collections of up to 20 traditions or customary behaviours that together seem to form unique cultures. Such practices include various forms of tool use, including hammers and pestles; courtship rituals such as leaf-clipping, where leaves are clipped noisily with the teeth; social behaviours such as overhead hand-clasping during mutual grooming; and methods for eradicating parasites by either stabbing or squashing them.

While observing chimpanzees, evolutionary psychologist Antoine Spiteri at the University of St Andrews in Scotland wanted to help settle the question of whether or not the apes learned such practices by watching others, as humans do, as opposed to simply knowing how to perform such behaviours innately.

Spiteri and his colleagues investigated six groups of chimpanzees, each with eight to 11 apes, living in captivity in Bastrop, Texas. The researchers taught a lone chimpanzee from one group one technique for obtaining food from a complex gadget, such as stabbing food with a tool. They next taught one chimp from another group a different technique for extracting food from the same gadget, such as pushing it out down a ramp. The extremely hot Texas weather made it hard for researchers to work, "And because participation by the chimpanzees in each of these studies has been completely voluntary, it sometimes means that we as experimenters have had to be extremely patient," Spiteri recalled. "Considering the insights we have gathered, it has been worth the sacrifice."

Over time, the researchers found that each technique for tool use and food extraction spread within each group. In essence, these groups displayed their own unique culture and local traditions.

A number of these chimpanzee groups are next-door neighbours living within eyeshot of each other, and researchers found traditions proved catching, with foraging practices spreading from one group to another. The findings were detailed in the June 19 issue of the journal Current Biology.

Japan's addictive media pods

Think of them as a home away from home for media addicts. In fact though, they're more than that. Japan's media immersion pods allow people to share their solitude too. Go along to a cyber café and you will find rows of media pods, which you just hire for as long as you like. And what do you get for your money? Inside you find a full range of technological entertainment: the Internet, DVDs, computer games, iTunes, as well as manga (Japanese comics) and food and drink. Make yourself at home.

People can rent these pods in ones or twos. You just go into your two square metres of pod, settle down on the soft floor or on the comfy sofas provided and choose your activity. An enormous plasma screen lets you view TV channels from any part of the world, play whatever computer games you wish, watch the latest DVDs or surf the net at incredibly high broadband speeds.

If you'd rather go low-tech, just choose your reading material – a huge range of comics and magazines, or listen to your favourite music on superb quality headphones. And don't worry about getting hungry. There's more than enough food and drink to keep you going. And if you have plans to stay the night, that's possible too. You can hire a pod overnight, and don't worry if you forget your toothbrush-you can buy one here! Customer satisfaction is high, and the reasons for using the pods are varied, as this selection of comments shows:

- A You just feel really free here – free to do whatever you want – there's so much more choice here than anywhere else. Sometimes I just come for a quick sleep.
- B If I come here I know I won't have to talk to anyone – I can go out at night, but not have to be sociable. That's quite special for a woman.
- C I know people don't think they're as cool as karaoke, but they cost much the same, and I just prefer them.
- D I just pop in during the day to catch up with the sports news – it gets me out of the office when I haven't got much to do.

- E When I use the Internet I don't like interruptions or pressure. If you go on the net at home you always feel guilty because you feel you should be spending time with the family instead. Here I can just relax and concentrate on the Internet.
- F When I leave work I don't always feel like going straight home, so I come along here – I can get some 'me' time.
- G I just like being by myself – it gives me my own space, which I can't get at home with my husband. Sometimes I spend the night here – women are perfectly safe.
- H What I like is that you get a real sense of privacy – you know that no one will bother you. The staff never check on what you're doing.

Hidenori Kimura, a sociologist who writes about intercultural encounters, said he believes Media Pods fulfill a deep and persistent cultural longing. "The Japanese system of competition for education, career and social esteem," Dr. Kimura explained, "forces young people to obsess over self-presentation, which costs them both fantasy and anonymity, the privileges of childhood. What Japanese young people want," in his view, "are opportunities to be free of their social status."

"Traditionally," he explained, "tea ceremonies and festivals have fulfilled this role of depriving people of their social status, thus helping them become 'nobody'. Tea ceremonies put everyone on the same social level. Everyone was just a person enjoying the tea ceremony and tea. Similarly, festivals among farmers allowed them to do what they wanted and feel free of norms and rules."

"The Media Pods now serve this purpose", he said. "Nobody cares what you do, which enables you to be absorbed in whatever fantasy you want to indulge in through net surfing, Web games or manga. Yet you can satisfy your timid desire to belong." "Staying in a Media Pod", he concluded, "is now part of jibun-sagashi, or the search for the true self."

SKILLS FOCUS

- 1 Read this essay question. Then read through the two texts and highlight any key words/ideas related to the topic of the essay.

We must stop blaming the government for rising youth crime and instead focus much more closely on parents. Good parenting is the most effective way to keep children out of trouble.

To what extent do you agree with this opinion? Use your own ideas and experiences to support your arguments with examples and relevant evidence.

Parents Preventing involvement in crime

In order to prevent your child getting into trouble with the law, it's important to understand the reasons why most young people offend in the first place.

What makes a child offend?

There are many reasons why a child may turn to crime, but the most common ones are:

- lack of education and playing truant;
- poor family relationships;
- peer pressure (having friends who commit crime);
- having family members who commit crime;
- drug abuse;
- mental health issues, such as attention deficit and hyperactivity disorder (ADHD).

Perhaps the most important thing to remember is that a young person's parents are the first and most important role models they will have in their life. If a child's parents set good examples of behaviour and show respect to other people, then they are much more likely to do the same.

Other role models

It is not just parents who can set a good example. Children and young people are also influenced by anyone else they feel a connection with. So teachers, other family members like uncles, aunts or grandparents, and even well-known people in the community can have an effect. Try to identify people like these who have good moral values and show kindness and respect for others, and encourage your child to spend time with them and be like them.

After school hours

Research has shown that most crimes committed by young people happen between the hours of 3:00 pm and 6:00 pm. Trying to stop your child from socialising with their friends after school is unlikely to make you very popular, but if you think your child is involved in crime it is worth knowing when they are most likely to offend.

How to prevent criminal or anti-social behaviour is being debated in primary schools. With so many television depictions of punishments based on the extremes of US prisons and courtroom dramas, as well as UK press stories of "soft" justice – many wonder whether young people have any real fear of the potential consequences of bad behaviour.

The charity Safeguarding Communities – Reducing Offending (Sacro), which provides services in conflict resolution and criminal and restorative justice, firmly believes lessons in crime and punishment should start in primary school. National schools co-ordinator Richard Hendry has worked with secondary school pupils on crime and youth culture, but believes it could begin much earlier. "The earlier the better," he said. "It could work for primary six and primary seven but I would not be looking for a shock approach.

"I think it would be helpful for everyone to have a true sense of what jail is and what experience of it is for young people," he added.

3 Which of the following do you think might make good 'topic sentences' for possible paragraphs in this essay? Two sentences are too informal for this type of essay.

- 1 Let's wake up and stop children getting into trouble.
- 2 It is quite common nowadays – when both parents work – for children to be left unsupervised for long periods of time.
- 3 Schools should be proactive in educating children about crime and punishment too.
- 4 Police crime statistics for vehicle offences committed by youths are shocking.
- 5 Children need good role models from whom they can learn values.
- 6 What I don't like is when my parents make me change my clothes just because visitors or relatives are coming.
- 7 Such solutions, however, can only work where struggling parents can get support.
- 8 More and more communities and the children who live in them are suffering today from petty crimes committed by other children.

4 Which section of the essay would the topic sentences you have chosen be appropriate for?

5 Now write an essay of at least 250 words using your plan.

GRAMMAR FOCUS: Zero and first conditionals

1 Match the phrases 1-8 to the phrases A-H to make complete sentences.

- 1 Criminals have to learn
- 2 Young offenders should only go to prison
- 3 Future society suffers the consequences
- 4 There should be alternatives to prison
- 5 We will only improve our justice system
- 6 Criminals are unlikely to get jobs
- 7 Locking people up doesn't work
- 8 Parents and schools must be involved

- A unless the government provides them.
- B if we pay more attention to victims.
- C unless we can re-educate offenders.
- D that crime doesn't pay.
- E especially if bullying is the issue.
- F when there is no alternative.
- G whenever we lock someone up.
- H unless crime involves violence.

2 Complete each sentence with the correct form of the verb in brackets.

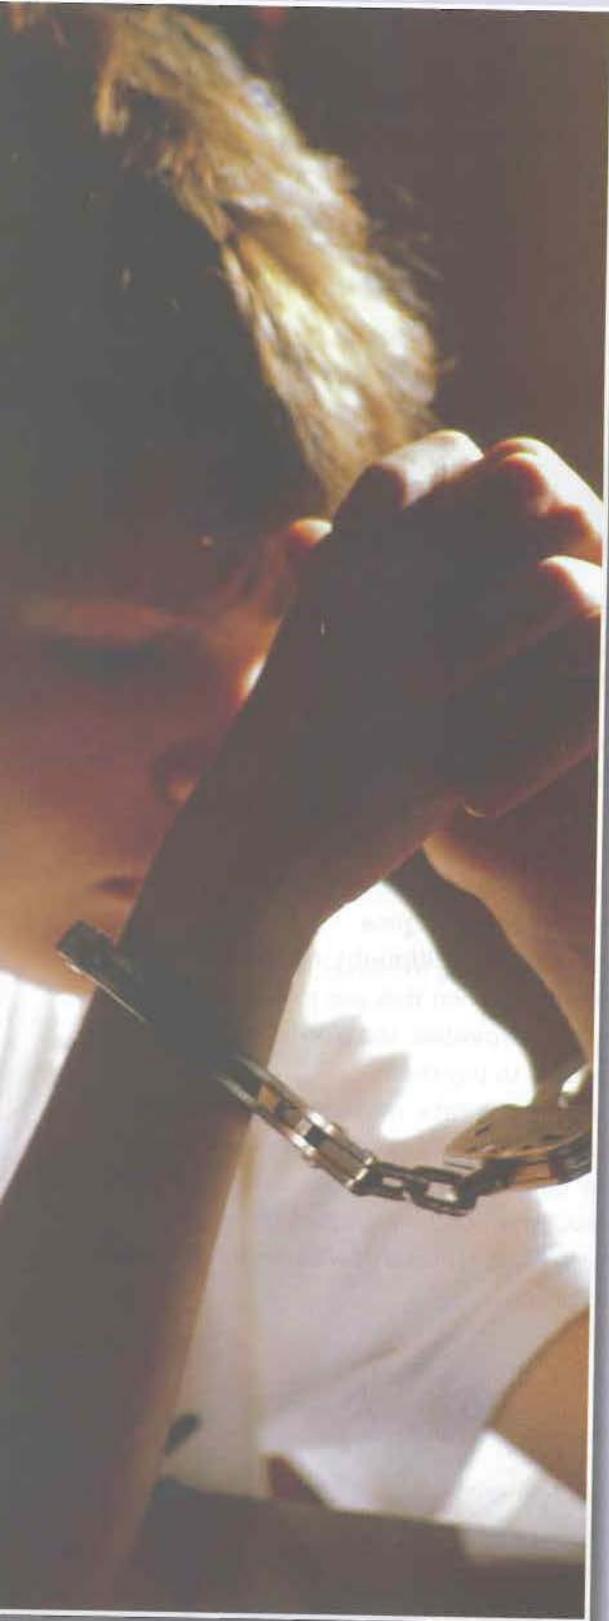

- 1 Prisons (not/be) the solution if we (not/have) the money to pay for them.
- 2 Things (only/get) better if we (start) teaching children about the consequences of crime.
- 3 We (not/deter) young people from crime if we (just/blame) their parents.
- 4 The situation on our streets (not/improve) unless we (tackle) gang culture.
- 5 Crime rates (be) unlikely to go down as long as social injustice (remain) the same.
- 6 If we (not/punish) fraud and corruption as seriously as theft, what message (we/send)?
- 7 We (have) to focus more on the victim if we (want) to make children understand the consequences of crime.
- 8 Probation schemes (not/work) unless criminals (get) help finding a job.

3 Look at the sentences below. Underline the two options that best complete each sentence. One option is incorrect.

- 1 If enough people protest, the government will/may/doesn't act.
- 2 People will commit crimes whenever/even if/ unless prison sentences are harsher.
- 3 We must/will/should involve parents if we want to tackle youth crime.
- 4 Prisoners should/will/might reoffend if they are not helped when they are released.
- 5 Fines work provided that/only if/unless it hurts people to pay them.
- 6 We will only create more problems if we can't/don't/wouldn't do more for victims.
- 7 Policing neighbourhoods does work as long as/unless/when citizens support the police.
- 8 Society suffers unless/if/whenever a child goes to prison.

4 Complete the second sentence using the word given. Make sure the meaning of both sentences is the same.

- 1 Tackling youth crime means getting parents and schools involved in solutions.
We if we get parents and schools involved in solutions.
- 2 Bans, fines and prison sentences must be harsher to deter criminals.
We if we make bans, fines and prison sentences harsher.
- 3 Probation may be a better alternative to imprisonment for non-violent criminals.
Provided probation may be a better alternative to imprisonment.
- 4 Prison only works for young offenders when it helps them to reform.
Prison it helps them to reform.
- 5 The police should talk about crime to schoolchildren provided that they do not frighten them.
It is good for the police to talk about crime in schools do not frighten the children.
- 6 We will not reduce crime without dealing with its causes.
We cannot reduce deal with its causes.
- 7 Teachers must act immediately on their suspicions of bullying.
Teachers must act children are being bullied.
- 8 We will encourage crimes like fraud unless we punish them as seriously as robbery.
We will only encourage crimes like fraud them as seriously as robbery.

Extension

- 1 On the whole, local producers tend to make low-budget comedies mainly for TV but we do have one or two directors who make really good classical films and social documentaries that are better than most things from America ...
- 2 People who say my country hasn't changed much are just wrong. In reality, kids are really into western music, fashion and clubbing. My parents' generation are still into coffee houses, family gatherings and traditional festivals.
- 3 In the past, mealtimes were the main daily social activity and going to friends' houses to eat with them was something people did at weekends, but nowadays people snack a lot more between doing other things and eat on the go.
- 4 Ideally I think it would be good if people met and socialised with friends more, but the way things are with so much reality TV and soap operas, as well as all the things you can do on the Internet, people really don't make an effort.
- 5 Take the Internet for example. You can immediately share photos, messages, news, conversations with groups of friends and do things like order food and get all kinds of film and music. You don't need to catch up with friends anymore because you share everything anyway.
- 6 Most people would probably say that they don't have time or are too tired after work to do things with other people, and at weekends they either just want to relax or have to take care of things like housework or shopping ... but I think you should think about your free time as much as your work.
- 7 Generally speaking, I think they are influenced by celebrities' lifestyle programmes and magazines and all these documentaries about healthy eating. We seem to get a new statistic everyday about how we harm ourselves if we don't do this or that. In my experience, though, people don't have to work out but just keep busy and active.
- 8 I think a lot of parents like to think that they're making enough quality time for their kids, but in reality the odd day out or one-week holiday isn't enough. I feel a lot of parents today think quality time just means spending money on their kids.

Closing

- A It's about getting the right balance.
- B I'm not sure mealtimes fit into a 24/7 world.
- C I suppose it's inevitable when both parents work.
- D And maybe tomorrow there'll be some completely new thing to do.
- E It's just the world moving on, I suppose.
- F They're more for local tastes, though.
- G That's the way it is with my friends at least.
- H Anyway, I am sure it will all change.

- 2 Practise saying these answers as naturally as possible. Record yourself and listen back to the recording.
- 3 Now cover the answers in Ex. 1 and practise answering the questions in your own way. Try, however, to structure your answer with an opening, extension and closing.

EXAM FOCUS

- 1 Look at these questions and think about how you would answer them.

So let's first discuss spending time with friends:

- What are the best ways to keep in touch with friends?
- Is it important to have friends that have the same interests as you?
- What types of situation can test a friendship?

Let's move on to talk about how children spend their free time:

- Do you think children in your country watch too much TV?
- What sort of clubs do you think young people should be encouraged to join?
- Should teenagers be encouraged to look for part-time jobs?

- 2 Now listen to candidate A and B discussing one set of these questions with the examiner and decide:

Which candidate, A or B

- 1 structures their answers well?
- 2 does not use a range of language?
- 3 links ideas clearly?
- 4 repeats words from the question?
- 5 uses very few connecting words?
- 6 talks about other people's points of view?
- 7 uses the language of speculation?
- 8 only uses present simple forms?

So which candidate dealt with this part of the test well? Refer to the tapescript.

TAPESCRIPT

Candidate A

Examiner: So Miguel, let's first discuss spending time with friends. What would you say are the best ways to keep in touch with friends?

Miguel: Well, it depends. If they live near you, I think you have to make time to see them. I know from my own experience if you don't make time to do things together ... you'll lose touch. That's why I've always tried to get friends round or go out with friends about twice a week. But if your friends live a long way away, I think you have to use things like the Internet and Facebook ...

Examiner: But don't you think young people perhaps overuse that kind of thing?

Miguel: No, I don't think so. People who say that's all kids do are wrong. Young people actually use technology so much because they have a lot of things going on in their lives. That's the way things are today.

Examiner: And what would you say are the types of things that can test a friendship?

Miguel: A lot of things. I think you always hope that friends won't lie to you and of course you expect them to keep in touch ... but I suppose if a friend didn't support you at a difficult time, you would wonder whether he was your friend. That's how I feel about my friends at least.

Candidate B

Examiner: So let's talk about how children spend their free time. Tell me Sasha, do you think children spend too much time watching TV?

Sasha: Children watch TV too much. It's bad for their eyes and their body and they don't go and play outside.

Examiner: And what do you think their parents can do?

Sasha: Parents can stop the TV. My parents, they sometimes stop the TV for my sister and tell her: 'Hey, go and do something with your friends.'

Examiner: And what sort of clubs do you think children should be encouraged to join?

Sasha: Join ... er ... um ... maybe dancing clubs dancing is good for their body and they go outside so they are not always at home.

Examiner: And how does membership of a club help children?

Sasha: They make friends ... go outside ... and learn new things which are good for them at school.

Benefits of Job Satisfaction

The benefits of job satisfaction are many. Here are four that come to mind:

1. Promotes a healthy, balanced lifestyle, 1)
(keep) stress levels to a minimum.
2. Fosters pride in your work, 2) (know) that you're doing something good.
3. Motivates you 3) (get out) of bed earlier, with more spring and energy.
4. Makes it easier 4) (focus) on more than just the money.

How to Find Job Satisfaction

Here are five tips:

1. People Need You

If you find yourself 5)
(wonder) why you're even bothering
6) (do) a job when no one seems 7)
(appreciate) what you do, then don't worry. There's always someone who relies on you, no matter what type of work you do.

The public rely on the trash-men to remove their unwanted garbage. The public rely on the fast-food trainee to provide them with easy, stress-free food.
No matter what job you have, there are always people out there who need you
8) (do) a good job.

2. Plan Your Day

Often, we'll find a day disappears as quickly as it arrived because we get distracted by minor chores and emergencies that keep 9)
..... (come up).

Make a plan of your day. You need
10) (make) sure your time is your own, so that you won't lose it by 11) (run) around aimlessly.

3. Mix It Up

Consistency is a good thing 12)
(have) at work. 13) (have) the same routine day after day after day makes you tired early in the day, and it kills any motivation you have for the job.
Decide on three things that you could introduce to your work that would mix it up. Then do them! Don't be afraid 14) (try) something new.

4. Talk With Your Colleagues

Your colleagues are not robots. They're human beings, just 15) (try) in their own way
16) (make) a living like you. So treat them as human beings. Get inquisitive. Get to know them a bit better each day and they'll realise that you're human too, and that it's OK 17) (talk) with each other about something other than work.

5. Take Pride

The work that you spend so many hours a day 18)
(do), has something personal about it that only you can claim. It was done by you.

Warren Buffett said, "There will never be a greater you, than you" and he spoke the truth. Only you can put your own stamp on the work you do. So take pride in this work, and see that no-one else can do the job as well as you can.

SKILLS FOCUS

- 1 Look at the lettered paragraphs in this article about how to behave in an office. Find and underline the topic sentence (i.e. the sentence that gives the main idea of the paragraph) in each one.

How to Behave at the Office to Advance Your Career

Workplace etiquette involves more than just saying 'please' and 'thank you'. When you come to work you step into a place where being polite involves a greater expanse of responsibility and thoughtfulness. Read the following tips to ensure that you aren't committing any of these workplace no-nos.

- A Few things annoy co-workers or supervisors more than someone who takes extra-long lunches or smoking breaks. If you can avoid smoking at work altogether, you should. People who do not smoke may become resentful of the extra time you take to indulge. When you go out to lunch, make sure you take only the allotted time. Stretching the time you spend away from your desk makes you look like you avoid hard work, no matter how productive you are.
- B No one likes someone who avoids his or her duties. Even if you complete all of your tasks, you should stay at work the required amount of time. Coworkers are quick to notice someone who comes in late and leaves a little early. If you have trouble getting to work on time, talk to your supervisor about your bad habit. Always put in at least as much time as the other people in your workplace, if not more. Be on time and leave on time.
- C Try to keep your conversations between you and co-workers at a low volume. Everyone at work is trying to do the same thing you are – get his or her job done. It is hard to concentrate when someone nearby continues to disrupt the workplace atmosphere with loud conversations, both on and off the phone. Monitor yourself and your voice. If you know that you tend to be loud, make a concerted effort to keep it quiet.
- D Your desk should be kept as clean as possible, but your personal workspace is minor compared to the shared spaces that are reserved for use by everyone. When you use a conference room or break area, always clean up after yourself. It is frustrating for those around you to discover the remains of your salad on the table in the lunchroom.
- E Though everyone occasionally must deal with personal emergencies at work, do your best to leave what is meant for home at home. If you have children, do not permit them to call you constantly at the office. Your co-workers will notice and it will likely bother some of them because it shows that your concentration is not centered on your tasks and that you take company time for personal issues. The same rule goes for friends and adult family members. Finally, try to avoid scheduling doctor appointments or paying bills while at work.
- F It seems that younger employees struggle with this issue more often. Issues at work may arise from time to time that elicit strong reactions from you or those around you. Minimize any emotional response you may have at work. Remember that constructive criticism is meant to help you and is not personal. Strong emotions may make you appear out of control, which is an undesirable workplace trait.
- G Find out what your company's email policy is and follow it. Do not forward email messages that you receive from friends and family to co-workers. Never send religious or political emails to people in the office; it could make people uncomfortable. Do not gossip about or discuss other people in email, as emails can be sent accidentally to the wrong person or be intercepted by management. If you do not want others to read what you have to say, do not send it in an email. Email is a powerful tool and should be respected, not abused.

2 a What do you notice about the position of nearly all the topic sentences in Ex. 1? What might be the reason for this?

b The other sentences in a paragraph provide explanation of the main point, additional detail or examples or draw a conclusion. Find examples of each of these in the paragraphs (A-G) in Ex. 1.

3 a The following statements are paraphrases of the topic sentences in Ex. 1. Match them to the paragraphs (A-G) they refer to.

- i This is what irritates the people you work with.
- ii Keep cool.
- iii Use email in accordance with company practice.
- iv Don't talk loud enough for your co-workers to hear you.
- v Just deal with things related to your work.
- vi Keep exactly to your hours.
- vii Keep all the work areas clean and tidy.

b Underline the key words in the paraphrases in 3a. Scan for these key words or paraphrases of them in each paragraph, and write them down.

- Para A:
- Para B:
- Para C:
- Para D:
- Para E:
- Para F:
- Para G:

4 a Match these headings to paragraphs A-G. Then, write down words from the text that helped you match the headings.

- i Leave Home at Home
- ii Control your Emotions
- iii Talking Loudly
- iv Making a Mess
- v Edit your Email
- vi Taking Long Breaks
- vii Coming in Late, Leaving Early

GRAMMAR FOCUS: May, might, could, should, ought to

- 1 Look at the myths in this article. Do you think they are true or not? Make up your mind before you read each paragraph.
- 2 Ten verbs are in bold in the article. What degree of certainty do they have? Mark them as certain, possible or probable in the box beside each one.

Jobs in the future – myth or reality?

Myth: 'Forty Years in the Job then Out'

Reality: Individuals can no longer plan on spending their entire working lives with one organisation. The corporate giants 1) will never again go back to hiring masses of 'long-term employees'. Instead, companies 2) could depend on a smaller core of permanent employees supplemented by temporary help. Recent changes affecting those jobs once considered 'safe' from layoffs are an indication that individuals need to be prepared for careers that 3) might include involuntary job loss as well as many job changes.

Myth: A College Education Will Guarantee a Good Job

Reality: Although occupations that require a bachelor's degree or other postsecondary education or training 4) ought to have faster-than-average rates of employment growth, a college education is no longer a guarantee of a good job. It is estimated 30 percent of new graduates 5) will either be unemployed or underemployed.

Despite the fact that a college education will not guarantee a good job, the economic advantages associated with greater schooling 6) ought to continue because 'the future belongs to the knowledge worker'. Even though college graduates will continue to have a tougher time getting into the job market, once in the market the benefits of their education 7) should begin to pay dividends.

Myth: Manufacturing Jobs Will Disappear

Reality: Although manufacturing jobs will continue to decrease, they are a long way from disappearing. One scenario for future manufacturing jobs is that they will change radically: new manufacturing jobs 8) might be created that will require different skills and pay less.

Myth: Technology Will Simplify Work

Reality: All indications are that technology 9) will continue to transform the workplace, thus requiring workers to continue to upgrade their skills. According to some experts, high-tech workers 10) may need to return to school to learn new skills every 5 to 10 years.

EXAM FOCUS

How to be a good manager

Becoming a good manager is not only about getting your job done, but more importantly, earning the respect of your team. First you must stop thinking of yourself as a 'Boss'. Whether you are the manager or not, you are first and foremost a part of the team. Don't alienate yourself by acting superior. Following these other tips will help to smooth your path.

A One of the hardest things for new managers is to trust other team members enough and to delegate. Typically, when a good engineer steps into the shoes of a manager, he still wants to do everything on his own. Don't fall into this trap. If you do not delegate responsibility to your team, your team members will feel stifled and will not be able to grow. And guess what, delegation is one of the hardest things a good manager needs to learn to do well. It involves trust and the ability to succeed without micromanaging.

B One of the things you will learn, as a new manager, is that when people are given a responsibility, most of them rise to the challenge. Give them a chance. Step back, keep track of the overall goal but don't walk up to your team members every half hour asking what is going on.

C As a manager, it is critical for you to 'take care' of your team, which includes shielding them from harsh criticism from others in the organisation. However, be very careful of over-protection. A good manager will always balance protection with positive criticism to ensure that while his team are motivated and happy, they also know their shortcomings so that they can improve. It is your responsibility to make sure that your team are on the path to constant personal improvement. The worst thing you can do is keep them under the impression that they are the 'best' and have them ignore areas of potential improvement. Plan milestones for your team members well in advance (typically a year at least) – so that you can track their progress concretely through the year. Your team deserve to know how they performed objectively.

D Take performance reviews seriously – in a typical corporation, the rise of your team largely depends on the reviews that you give to the upper management. A review should be timely and as objective as possible. If you have a problem with a team member, step back and think if it's a problem with the team member or with you. If it is the former, before you put it in the review, consider if it is one-off, due to special circumstances or a repeated problem that needs to be corrected. Give opportunities for your team to give you input on what they think of you. Most importantly, act on their feedback. Being a manager does not always make you right. Don't let your ego get in the way – learning is a 2-way process, from you to the team and from the team to you. Self improvement is key for you to improve as a manager and a leader. And, recognise individuals and teamwork – I personally believe both are critical. Team recognition bolsters team morale, while personal recognition provides a lot of individual motivation and urges others to rise to the challenge.

E Be ready to objectively explain individual recognition (or the lack of it). As I mentioned above, I am of the personal opinion that individual recognition is key in addition to collective recognition. However, remember that it is the right of other team members to challenge you on why they were not recognised. As a good manager, you should be able to give concrete responses on milestones that were missed. If your responses are objective and non-confrontational, they will usually be accepted and taken as an input for self-improvement. Before declaring a bad apple, consider if it's 'another fruit' – remember that not everyone excels at every job. If you have assigned a person to be responsible in a particular area and for some reason that person is failing in his work, don't just declare he is not 'worthy' to be in your team. Often, a simple re-assignment to a different responsibility can change things drastically.

Be there in times of need. There will be a time for everyone when they face personal/family problems. Those who genuinely help during these times of need are those who form long lasting friendships. Do as much as possible to help your team get over hard times, should they seek your assistance. Remember this – jobs come and go, teams form and break up, but friendships last forever. When you genuinely help a person in time of need, this is never forgotten and this is how loyalty builds.

N. B.: Try to take no more than 20 minutes to complete the reading task.

Average number of weekday trips by mode of transport Sutherland Shire, New South Wales

The graph shows the number of trips made in Sutherland Shire (New South Wales) on an average weekday using private vehicles 1) public transport (train and bus journeys) between 1991 and 2006.

From 1991 until around 2000 there was a significant increase in the use of private vehicles in Sutherland Shire both as a driver (from around 400,000 to 550,000) and as a passenger (from around 170,000 to 230,000). Figures for private vehicle drivers peaked around mid-2000, 2) figures for passenger trips peaked slightly earlier in late 1999. Trips made as a passenger then fell back to around 170,000 by mid-2002. Trips made as a driver 3) dipped 4) the decline here continued until mid-2004, by which time the figure had fallen to around 500,000.

From mid-2002 there was a steady rise in trips as a private vehicle passenger back to peak levels of 230,000 by 2006. The increase in private vehicle trips as a driver between mid-2004 and mid-2005 from 500,000 back to 550,000, 5), was short-lived, with figures declining again – 6) less sharply – from mid-2005 into 2006.

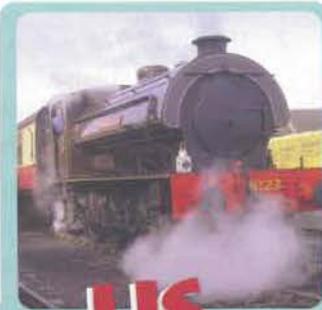

The trends in the use of public transport were 7) uneven for this period 8) perhaps can be seen as more so. From 1991 until 1999 there was a steady increase in the number of bus trips on an average weekday from around 20,000 to 30,000. This figure continued to rise until mid-2002 – 9) only slightly – peaking at around 33,000. Figures for trips made by train rose in the same period 10), doubling in fact from 35,000 to 70,000.

From their peaks in 2003, figures for bus trips 11) train trips fell sharply. Train figures fell back to 50,000 12) bus figures dropped by around 60% to 14,000, 13) trips made by bus had risen again to around 25,000 by 2006.

On the whole, the graphs show more variable trends in the use of public transport than the use of private vehicles in the period from 1999-2006, 14) the total figures for trips using public transport were much smaller.

4 Look at the graph below which shows the number of rail passenger journeys each year in the UK between 1920 and 2009. Decide whether each statement in Ex. 3 is T (true) or F (false) in relation to the information in the graph.

Note: There were no passenger journeys on Britain's national rail network during the years of World War II (1940–1949).

EXAM FOCUS

You should spend about 20 minutes on this task.

The bar chart below shows the percentage use of different means of transport by workers in New York State, the New York borough of Brooklyn and the US as a whole in 2009.

Summarise the information by selecting and reporting the main features and make comparisons where relevant.

Write at least 150 words.

Look at this opening section to this task by a student. How do you think it could be improved?

The bar chart shows the percentage use of different means of transport by three different groups of the US working population in 2009 and I will write about the main features which are that New York State is different to whole US and Brooklyn, New York is different too.

So what about US as a whole? More workers use car and carpool than any other means. Public transport is next and then walking and bike and very few workers work at home.

Modern Living

VOCABULARY FOCUS

1 Look at this interview with a man who decided to live a life without money. Fill in the gaps with a word from the box.

- food • weekends • packaging • H • closest • gym • winter
- navigation • twenty • chains • access • game • bother
- sunrise • shopping • better • mobile • cards • personal • i

Moneyless living

Journalist: So Mark, how did you decide to lead a life without money?

Mark: I suppose my decision to give up money – not just cash but 1) credit too – was made seven years ago, when I stumbled upon a DVD about Gandhi.

Journalist: Tell me more ...

Mark: Well he said we should “be the change we want to see in the world”. I realised then that working for an organic food company as I was doing would never be quite enough. I mean the organic food industry, though not 2)-four-seven junk 3) living, was part of the conventional system it was trying to change ... that is ... excess plastic 4), massive food miles, big businesses and restaurant 5) buying up little ones.

Journalist: So what did you do?

Mark: Well I found a caravan that someone else didn't want any more and I volunteered at 6) at an organic farm near Bristol in return for a place to park it.

Journalist: So what do you live on?

Mark: Well, for food I grow my own, collect it in the forest and swap what I grow for other things I need.

Journalist: And what about cooking without gas or electricity?

Mark: Well ... cooking outside has become one of the joys of my life. I now can't think of anything 7) than marvelling at the world at 8) and sunset while preparing my daily meals. Birds in the trees around my kitchen have become my 9) Pod, and observing wildlife has taught me much more about nature than any documentary I've seen on any 10) D screen.

Journalist: And how do you manage without other technology?

Mark: Well I did spend money (about £360) before beginning the experiment on a solar panel to supply me with enough electricity for a light, my laptop and 11) phone – I can only receive calls. The panel has always provided light – but in 12) my phone and Internet 13) time were severely restricted – which was frustrating.

Journalist: So what other drawbacks are there to moneyless living?

Mark: Everything takes much more time. Hand-washing clothes, for instance, using laundry liquid made by boiling up some nuts doesn't 14) me but it can take two hours and finding stuff in rubbish bins – such as the steamer I cook with – takes far longer than popping to the local 15) centre for one.

Journalist: And what about transport?

Mark: Cycling the 36-mile round-trip to Bristol takes a lot more time and energy than driving or catching a bus, but it's also an economical alternative to my old 16) subscription or getting a 17) trainer, and much more enjoyable than using a car with satellite 18)

Journalist: So what's been the best part of the experience?

Mark: Well I'd much rather spend time making my own bread outdoors than playing on a 19) console ... I suppose where money once gave me a sense of security, I now find that in friends and the local community. Some of my 20) friends are people I've only recently met because I've had to build real relationships based on trust and kindness, not money.

- 2  Now listen to the interview and see if you found the correct missing word for each gap in Ex 1.
- 3 Complete each gap with the preposition in, at or on.

Parents fined over term-time holidays

Rising numbers of parents are being fined for taking children out of school for cheap holidays 1) term time, research suggests.

Many families are believed to have been caught staying at home 2) the summer holidays and delaying the family vacation until the autumn to save money. Family holidays now represent the most common reason for school absence after illness.

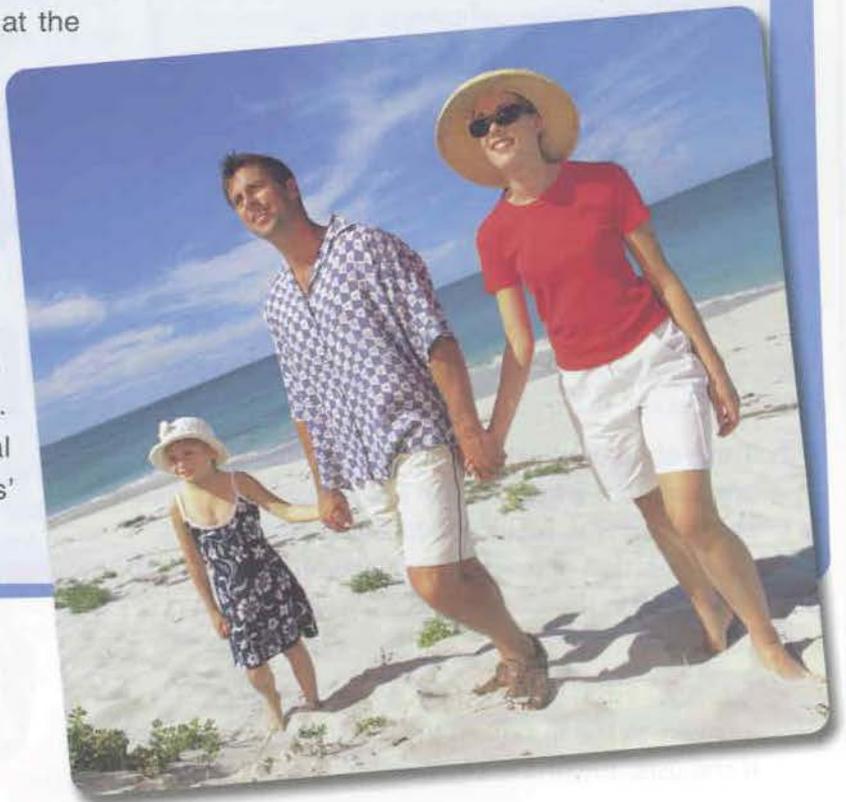

In Liverpool, fines have increased by 50 per cent. The problem is being fuelled by a price war between low-cost airlines at the city's John Lennon Airport which started 3) spring and is set to continue 4) the New Year.

Ron Collinson, Liverpool's chief attendance officer, said: "We see some families going 5) holiday two or three times a year ... and I don't mean 6) weekends or 7) special occasions or 8) parents' odd days off.

"They always seem to take them 9) key times for the schools, when we're trying to settle them into new environments or even 10) exam times."

Schools are currently allowed to allow families to take children out of school 11) term time for special reasons and are pressured to do so particularly 12) the months of May and September by parents looking for cheap family package deals.

Absence for family holidays accounted for almost one-in-10 days lost nationally.

SKILLS FOCUS

- 1 Look at the questions below and match them with a short answer (A-J) that could be a natural response to each one.

- 1 F Do you prefer modern or traditional music from your country?
- 2 How often do you go out with friends?
- 3 What special occasions do families celebrate together in your country?
- 4 What piece of technology do you value most?
- 5 Where do you go shopping?
- 6 When do you typically use the computer?
- 7 Do you still write letters?
- 8 Would you like to live abroad?
- 9 Is going to the cinema popular in your country?
- 10 What is an ideal holiday for you?

- A I hope to study abroad ...
- B Twenty-four seven ...
- C The microwave, definitely ...
- D Apart from religious festivals, it's mainly birthdays and anniversaries ...
- E Not really ...
- F It depends ...
- G I can't stand shopping ...
- H Not as much as I'd like ...
- I Something completely different ...
- J It used to be ...

- 2 Think about how you would develop the answers to the questions in Ex. 1, justify the short answer in each case. Make a note next to each question of one or two key-words you might use in developing these answers.
- 3  Now listen to a student developing her answers to the questions in Ex. 1. Listen to see if she uses any of the key-words you noted.

- 4  Listen again. Can you predict how the student will finish each answer to the questions in Ex. 1? Match A-J to questions 1-10 in Ex. 1. There is a pause on the recording to allow you to predict this.

- A ... that's pretty typical where I am from.
- B ... life is just so hectic.
- C ... I just think the world has moved on.
- D ... that's a completely different thing.
- E ... something exotic and something fun.
- F ... I suppose it's all about the mood I'm in.
- G ... it's my basic life tool.
- H ... it's often a last minute thing though.
- I ... the sooner it's over, the better.
- J ... it's a pity, I think.

- 5 Look at these three gadgets/inventions. Talk briefly about each one ... answering the question: Do you think this will catch on in your country/with people your age? Think about how similar/different other people's views might be to yours. Record yourself while speaking. When you listen back think about how you developed your answers.

- 1 Cheap pre-paid phones that get rid of your monthly bills.

- 2 'Sakadachi Nian-Chan' by SegaToys computerised pets

- 3 Food Packaging Fashion clothing made from recycled food packaging.

GRAMMAR FOCUS: Review of past and perfect tenses

1 Complete the text with the correct form of the verb in bold (present perfect simple or past simple). You may have to use some passive forms.

Twenty-somethings

According to a recent global youth survey, one of the largest 1) (ever/conduct), these are the top ten trends in twenty-somethings lives.

1. Real-time expectations

Anyone in his or her 20s living in an economically developed community 2) (never/know) life without instant communication. If it's not real time, twenty-somethings switch their focus to something that is.

2. Living more intense local lives

As expert users of real-time technology, they live locally, more intensely and Facebook typifies this trend. With over 500 million users worldwide, it 3) (start) by twenty-somethings at Harvard. It 4) (grow) to other local groups (e.g. students at other universities) and now like many big cities, Facebook 5) (become) just a collection of different localities.

3. Radically transparent

Twenty-somethings 6) (grow up) with reality TV and radical celebrity culture – with the media looking into every corner of people's lives. Right or wrong, this is a generation that's on a clear trend toward being more transparent about its thoughts, feelings and actions.

4. Expecting cheap or free everything

Globalization 7) (make) many essentials of life very cheap. The Internet 8) (accustom) them to getting music, software and services for free, either legally or illegally.

5. Entertainment must be part of the deal

Twenty-somethings 9) (grow up) with animated, interactive, fun graphics in the classroom and in museums. Hence the notion of Edutainment.

6. Worrying about the planet

Climate change, disappearing species, habitat destruction and water shortages 10) (be) daily news for twenty-somethings through all their adult life. In the survey, 64 percent of respondents 11) (see) climate change affecting them seriously in their lifetime and 82 percent 12) (think) it would affect future generations seriously.

7. Seeing luxuries as standard

Twenty-somethings now think nothing of paying significant amounts for key products and services that 13) (consider) luxuries in the past: smart phones, iPod Touch, wide-screen TVs and higher education as far as they can go.

8. Pro-business, anti-multinational

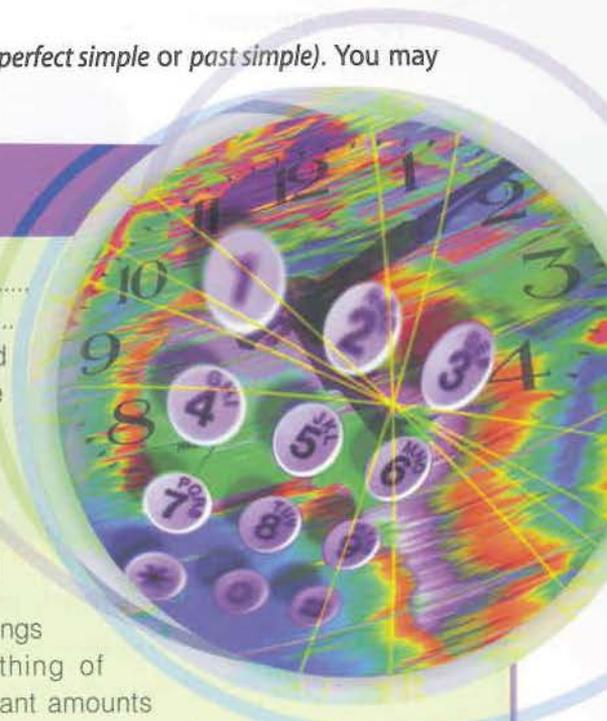

All around the world they 14) (raise) in an environment in which free markets 15) (regard) as the solution to everything and which certainly 16) (deliver) plenty of consumer goodies to make life more fun. Twenty-somethings aren't anti-business but they do think multinational corporations have too much power.

9. Regulate media bias

Media 2010 is a lot bigger field than it 17) (be) in 2000 or 1990. Twenty-somethings think all news media should be regulated but at the same time, they don't want government to regulate social media. It's called MySpace, after all.

10. Naturally Me but aspiring to We

Whether the national culture is highly individualistic (e.g. United States) or more collectivist (e.g. China), twenty-somethings 18) (encourage) to be more selfish than 19) (be) previous generations: to be more 'Me'. Yet they are also now aware that pursuing selfish interests creates the planetary problems that are worrying them.

- 2 Look at this extract from an interview with someone living in modern China. Complete each gap with an appropriate present or past form of the verb in brackets.

Writer interview:

KRISTIN BARR O'KEEFE
in China

Q: You're an American writer living in Shanghai, China. How 1) (you/end up) there?

A: In 2005, my husband 2) (say) to me, "How would you feel about living in China?" "China?"

"Mmmhmm, ... my company wants me to go there for a couple of years." Until that moment, I 3) (not/ever/consider) living in China. Italy? Sure. Greece? Absolutely. But China?

Still, it 4) (not/take) me long to make a decision. I 5) (be) an adventurous writer and a woman in love. Why not move to China? After a few short seconds of consideration, I 6) (say), "Sure, let's go."

Five months later we 7) (live) in Shanghai. I 8) (not/speak) a word of Mandarin, 9) (not/know) a soul, and honestly, 10) (not/know) much about Chinese culture (other than what I 11) (learn) during our three-day cultural training class). But I 12) (be) fascinated. I

13) (grab) my Mac and my camera and set off. I 14) (explore) ... and writing ... ever since. My second book, which 15) (come out) a few months ago, is about China.

Q: It sounds like you 16) (make) a niche for yourself as a writer in China through teaching, writing about your adopted home, and creating a reading series. What do you like most about living in China? Is it a good place to live as a writer?

A: Living in China is this crazy, kooky, wonderful, frustrating, overwhelming, fulfilling, eye-opening, experience. I 17) (live) here for four years now and I'm pretty sure I 18) (find) enough material to last a lifetime. Two lifetimes maybe. Since moving here in 2006, I 19) (work) hard to create a niche for myself in Shanghai, but I 20) (also/work) hard lately to establish myself as a writer abroad in the larger world community. This is key, especially if you want to someday publish a book in the U.S.

- 3 Now listen and see if your answers were correct.

EXAM FOCUS

1 Put the tips below into part of the speaking exam that they refer to.

Tips

1. Be prepared for the examiner to ask you detailed follow-up questions.
2. Use the full time to make notes before you speak.
3. Try to involve other people's perspectives in your answers.
4. Imagine yourself in an interview situation for this part of the test.
5. Try to avoid 'yes'/'no' answers as they can limit what you say.
6. Discuss your views by providing detailed explanation.
7. Make sure your notes provide points you can expand on.
8. Imagine yourself having to describe objects/events/people in detail in this part.
9. Think about explaining your views in relation to your own and others' experiences.
10. Expect to answer questions on either your home/home town or work/studies.
11. Use the prompts provided to organise different parts of what you say.
12. Give relevant information about yourself supported by examples.

2 Now think about the advice in the checklist for Part 2. Do this part 2 exam task. Record yourself. As you listen back, think about the points in the checklist and anything you could do to improve it.

Examiner: I'm going to give you a topic and I'd like you to talk about it for one or two minutes. Before you talk you'll have one minute to think about what you're going to say. You can make some notes if you wish.

I'd like you to describe a cultural or entertainment event that you have been to.

You should say:

- when and where it took place
- what happened at the event
- who attended and how they reacted

and explain what you remember most about it.

Talks, presentations and lectures

VOCABULARY FOCUS

1 What in your opinion makes a good speaker? Grade these points (1 = low, 2 = medium, 3 = high). Change the wording of the points you don't grade highly, so you can give them a high grade.

How important are these points for you when you listen to a talk?

The speaker ...

- talks at a slow pace
- makes lots of eye contact
- reads aloud from notes on PowerPoint
- uses lots of gestures
- speaks in a loud voice
- uses lots of animations in PowerPoint
- makes jokes
- gives the talk a clear structure
- uses lots of visual aids
- looks very confident
- keeps to one topic for the whole talk
- chooses an interesting topic
- is well dressed
- looks nice

2 Look at these sections of a talk and the expressions that are often used in these sections. Complete the expressions.

Sections of a talk	Typical expressions
Introduction	Today, I'd 1) to talk about ... What we're going 2) during the talk is ...
Body of talk	I'd like to 3) to my next point. The 4) I'd like to make is ... 5) on to my next point.
Summary	6) summary, ... So, my 7) were ...
Conclusion	What we can 8) from all this is ...
Question time	Does 9) any questions? 10) to you.

Now think of a topic you know well, e.g. the town I live in, my plans for the future, the reasons why I like .... Give a short talk (out loud or silently), following the above order of sections and using as many of the expressions as you need. Record yourself, then listen back to it.

3 Complete the sentences with the correct adjective.

- 1 When someone gives a long talk in a monotonous voice on a subject you have no interest in, you feel b.....
- 2 When you know your subject well and have thought carefully about how to present it you feel c.....
- 3 Some people feel really e..... when they go to hear famous people giving talks.
- 4 Talking in front of large audiences full of people you don't know often makes people feel n.....
- 5 If a speaker is good, he/she will make you want to learn more about the subject, so you'll feel c.....
- 6 If you go to a good talk that gives you lots of useful information you leave it feeling s.....
- 7 When a speaker talks too fast or in a confusing way the audience often feel d..... about what he/she is really trying to say.
- 8 Sitting listening to talks all day can, surprisingly, leave people feeling t.....

4 Match the words in these two circles to make collocations about talks, as in the example.

6 🎧 Listen to these extracts from a description given by a university lecturer of his experience using PowerPoint slides in his class. Choose the option A, B or C which is true of each extract.

Extract 1

- A His colleague used slides.
- B He used slides to make notes.
- C He taught his colleague to use slides.

Extract 2

- A He had always used lots of visual aids.
- B He liked interacting with his students.
- C His colleague structured his lectures very carefully.

Extract 3

- A He made frequent eye contact with his students.
- B He always did a rehearsal of his lecture beforehand.
- C His classes became less interactive.

Extract 4

- A The students didn't like the way he used gestures.
- B The students liked the new information they got from the slides.
- C The students wanted him to go back to using a board.

Extract 5

- A Using the board helped students to be more responsive.
- B The teacher made more use of questions.
- C Using slides increased students' attention span.

SKILLS FOCUS

- 1 Write the signal words/phrases in the box which shows their function.
- To sum up • Firstly • In addition • For instance
 - But • As a whole • What I'm trying to say is
 - To conclude • Last of all • Next

- 2 Now from your memory add at least one other signal word/phrase to each box.

- 3 Listen to the recording and quickly write down a signal word/phrase each speaker could use.

5	10

- 4 Listen to this extract from a lecture and complete the notes and tables below with NO MORE THAN TWO WORDS for each answer.

The speaker will talk about:

1 what

2 do we all?

3 learn it

4 of grammar in learning a foreign language

The two meanings of grammar

The way we use 5) of words to 6)

The way we use 7) to talk about 8) and their uses.

Complete the summary below.

The speaker thinks it's clear that we all 9) because we can all speak with one another. But we don't all know it 10) i.e. we are not aware of knowing it. Many people don't know what 11) to use to describe the language they use. This is similar to a 12) who plays very well but can't explain what they do.

GRAMMAR FOCUS: The future

1 Match the sentences to the uses of the verbs.

- 1 On Thursday we're going to hear a talk about how to increase your brain power.
- 2 I'll give you a lift to the talk if you want.
- 3 The coach to the conference leaves at 6pm.
- 4 I'm sure he'll give a brilliant talk.
- 5 You can see from how nervous he is that the talk isn't going to be very good.
- 6 I'll buy the ticket for you – as a present. You can be sure of that.

Uses of the verbs

- A To make a promise
- B To talk about a timetabled future event
- C To make a prediction based on present evidence
- D To talk about a decision you're just making
- E To talk about plans
- F To predict something with confidence

2 Read these rules about expressing the future in English. Correct any mistakes.

- We use 'going to' to talk about things that we are thinking of doing, or which we can see from present evidence will probably happen in the future.
- We use the present simple to talk about events that are organised to happen in the future.
- We use 'will' to talk about decisions we recently made, predictions we feel fairly sure about, offers and promises.

3 Look at this programme for a summer language school then fill in the gaps in the email.

Sunday
19:30 Welcome party in Potter Room.

Monday
14:30 Talk about Edinburgh followed by guided tour. Get coach from outside main gates.
19:30 Cookery class – presentation of some old favourites. Learn to cook British specialities! We guarantee success!

Tuesday
14:30 Trip to see Forth Bridge. Returning at 6p.m.

Wednesday
20:00 Prize giving – Oscars for best posters, websites and acting.

Friday - Sunday
Weekend trip to London (deadline for signing up: Wednesday 6p.m.).

Hi Mum,

I arrived fine and all is well i.e. bedroom, facilities, etc. People seem friendly too and there's a great social programme. This evening at 19:30 there 1) (be) a welcome party, so I 2) (go) to that as it 3) (enable) me to meet my classmates and other students. Then on Monday, I 4) (attend) a British cookery class. I think that 5) (be) good fun. That 6) (be) after a guided tour round Edinburgh in the afternoon. I haven't looked at the rest of the programme in detail but I do know they 7) (take) a group to London next weekend. I've decided I 8) (definitely/take) advantage of that. I'd love to go to London. So, it looks as if things 9) (be) good.

Got to go now. I 10) (ring) you tomorrow night – promise.

Love

4 You will hear a school student talking about a presentation he needs to give. Before you listen, read the transcript and predict what future form (will, going to or present simple) he will use for the verbs in brackets. Then listen to check your answers and, after, match the verbs to the uses (A-F).

I'm preparing a talk to give to my classmates about our history project. The talk 1) (be) on Friday and I've never given a talk to an audience before. I'm pretty nervous about it, but I'm sure they 2) (be) interested because it's a really good project. Let me tell you what it's about and maybe you can give me some help.

I've planned the first part. I 3) (start) with a general description of the project; you know, its aims and how we collected our data. Then I think I 4) (show) them some PowerPoint slides of Hadrian's Wall and ask them what they know about it. Asking them questions 5) (involve) them a bit and hopefully get their interest. I expect they 6) (not know) much at all because they've been investigating other things. After that, I 7) (show) them a picture of our project group – it's a great group and we've worked well together. I'm OK with this bit and my teacher said to use plenty of eye contact and remember my body language.

What I think I 8) (do) next in the presentation, is tell them all about the wall – why it was built, how long it is and that kind of thing. I expect they 9) (enjoy) that, as most of the group are interested in history. In fact, the whole class 10) (go) to Hadrian's wall sometime next month, so my talk 11) (give) them some background information before we go. I'm really looking forward to that trip and I'm sure we 12) (have) a great time.

Anyway, it's not the content of the talk that worries me, it's the delivery. The thing is, my PowerPoint skills are a bit limited and as you can see, I 13) (never/finish) it on time at this rate. It takes me ages to put it together. You're good at PowerPoint. Do you think you can help me a bit this evening? Tell you what, I 14) (make) you an offer. If you come round at 7 o'clock, we can work on it for an hour or so and then I 15) (order) a pizza. Then we can relax and watch the next episode of Spooks which 16) (start) at 9 o'clock. What do you think?

- | | |
|---------|--|
| A | To make a promise |

| F | To predict something with confidence |

Listen to the boy talking again and note how he says the future forms – does he use full forms or contractions? Does he say them with stress or without?

Read the text over carefully until you fully understand it. Then read it out loud. You could record yourself. Try to say the future forms in the same way as they boy did.

SKILLS FOCUS

Scanning

- 1 Quickly scan these two sets of questions and answers about rainforest animals and underline all dates, numbers and names of things.

As you know, dates, numbers and names are the kind of information you need to look for when you scan.

Q: Why do more animal species live in the rainforest than other parts of the world?

A: Scientists believe that there is a great diversity of animals because rainforests are the oldest ecosystems on earth. Some rainforests in Southeast Asia have been around for at least 100 million years, when dinosaurs roamed the earth. During the Ice Ages, the last of which ended about 10,000 years ago, the frozen areas of the North and South Poles spread over much of the earth, causing a high rate of animal extinction. But the giant freeze did not reach a number of refuges in tropical rainforests. Therefore, rainforest plants and animals continued to evolve, developing into the most diverse and complex ecosystems on earth.

The nearly perfect conditions for life also helped contribute to the great number of species. With constant temperatures of around 75-80 degrees fahrenheit, animals don't have to worry about freezing during cold winters or finding shade in the hot summers. They rarely have to search for water, as rain falls almost every day in tropical rainforests.

Q: How do all these species manage to live together without running out of food?

A: The constant search for food, water, sunlight and space is a 24-hour pushing and shoving match. With this fierce competition, you may be amazed that so many different species of animals can all live together. But this is actually the cause of the huge number of different species.

The main secret lies in the ability of many animals to adapt to eating a specific plant or animal, which few other species are able to eat. Have you ever wondered, for instance, why toucans and parrots have such big beaks? These beaks give them a great advantage over other birds with smaller beaks. The fruits and nuts from many trees have evolved with tough shells to protect them from predators. In turn toucans and parrots developed a large strong beak, which serves as a nut cracker and provides them with many tasty meals.

Some rainforest species have populations that number in the millions. Other species consist of only a few dozen individuals. Living in limited areas, most of these species are endemic, or found nowhere else on earth. The Maues marmoset, a species of monkey, wasn't discovered until recently. Its entire population lives within a few square miles in the Amazon rainforest. It's so small, it can fit in a person's hand!

- 2 Answer the questions by scanning the texts in Ex. 1 for the correct information.

- 1 How long have some Southeast Asian rainforests been around?
- 2 What ended about 10,000 years ago?
.....
- 3 What is the temperature in the rainforests?
.....

- 4 What two animals with big beaks are mentioned?
.....
- 5 What kind of animal is the Maues marmoset?
.....
- 6 In which forest was the Maues marmoset discovered?
.....

3 Read the text in Ex. 1 again and underline the answers to these two questions:

- A Why did rainforest animals survive the great freeze?
- B Why are there so many different animals in the rainforests?

You can see that the kind of reading needed to answer the questions in Ex. 3 is very different from scanning. It requires you to read a sentence or sentences from the text in great detail to understand exactly what is said. Reading for detail in this way is often tested in IELTS reading tasks: True/False/Not Given and Yes/No/Not Given.

4 Identifying writer's views/claims

Read the next question and answer set from the same text, and next to the statements below, write

- YES if the statement agrees with the views of the writer
- NO if the statement contradicts the views of the writer
- NOT GIVEN if it is impossible to say what the writer thinks about this

- 1 It is easy to see many different kinds of mammals in rain forests.
- 2 Insects can be dangerous.
- 3 Some insects have yet to be named and classified.
- 4 Ants can help other species to survive.
- 5 Ants can be very aggressive towards ants from different groups.

Q: Which type of rainforest species is most numerous?

A: If you were to visit a rainforest, you probably wouldn't run into many jaguars or monkeys. The only living animals you could be sure to see are the millions of insects creeping and crawling around in every layer of the rainforest. Scientists estimate that there are more than 50 million different species of invertebrates living in rainforests. One scientist found 50 different species of ants on a single tree in Peru! You would probably only need a few hours of poking around in a rainforest to find an insect unknown to science. You could even name it after yourself!

Insects are often beautiful and always fascinating. Have you ever heard of an ant that farms? Or ants that act as security guards? Leaf-cutter, or parasol ants, can rightfully be called the world's first farmers. They climb trees up to 100-foot tall and cut out small pieces of leaves. They then carry these fragments, weighing as much as 50 times their body weight, back to their homes. Sometimes they need to travel 200 feet, equal to an average human walking about 6 miles with 5,000 lbs. on his/her back! The forest floor is converted to a maze of busy highways full of these moving leaf fragments.

These ants don't eat the leaves they have collected, but instead bury them underground. The combination of leaves and substances that the ants produce such as saliva allows a type of fungus to grow. This fungus is the only food that they need to eat.

The perfect partnership – Azteca ants live on the Swollen Thorn Acacia Tree, which offers the ants everything needed for survival – lodging, water, and food for themselves and their young. In return, the ants protect the trees from predators. Whenever the ants feel something moving at the foot of the tree, they rush to fiercely fight the intruder. They also protect it from vines and other competing plants that would otherwise strangle it. As a result, nothing can grow near these trees. They are the only trees with a built-in alarm system!

Identifying Information

5 Read another question and answer set from the same text, and next to the statements below, write

- TRUE if the statement agrees with the information
- FALSE if the statement contradicts the information
- NOT GIVEN if there is no information on this

- 1 Millions of species have become extinct over the last century.
- 2 There are three main reasons why animals are sold.
- 3 Some animals have survived changing environments while others haven't.
- 4 Comet strikes in the industrial age were catastrophic for animals.
- 5 Animals can become extinct through our lack of thought.

Q: Is it true that dozens of animal species a day become extinct in tropical rainforests?

A: An average of 137 species are driven into extinction every day in the world's tropical rainforests. Logging and cattle ranching have contributed to the loss of millions of acres of tropical rainforest. Animals and people alike lose their homes when trees are cut down. These animals are given no warning to move – no time to pack their bags – and most die when the forest is destroyed. The cutting down of trees is not the only reason for species extinction. Thousands of monkeys and other primates are traded illegally on the international market each year, wanted for their fur, as pets, or for scientific research. Parrots and macaws have also become popular pets; buyers will pay up to $10,000 for one bird. Even the king of the jungle, the jaguar, is in danger of becoming extinct because its fur is highly valued. Pollution from mining has killed fish populations in the mighty Amazon River. Many indigenous people, who have depended on these fish for centuries, have become sick from the poisoned fish.

Extinction is a natural process. Species like the saber-toothed tiger died off from their failure to adapt to a changing environment. Others, like the dinosaurs, died off due to a catastrophic event (as an asteroid striking the earth). But today humans are altering their habitats too quickly for animals to adapt. So many species have become extinct in such a short period of time, that the impact of the industrial age has been compared to that of a comet strike on the diversity of life.

Humans must share the earth with all plants and animals. We must stop the current high extinction rate as it would be a sad world indeed without the beauty of a toucan or the grace and power of the jaguar.

GRAMMAR FOCUS: Past tense of modals would/should/might

1 Read these texts about dinosaurs. Complete the gaps with would/should/might have + the past participle of the verb in brackets in the active or passive.

Paleontologist Kristi Curry-Rogers studies ancient fossils to determine how fast dinosaurs grew. Because the bones of modern day reptiles grow slowly, scientists had always assumed that dinosaurs grew slowly as well. Experts had estimated that it 1) (take) up to 120 years for an enormous Apatosaurus to grow to its full length of 70 to 90 feet. To Curry-Rogers, this didn't make sense.

In Bozeman, Montana, she found fossilized Apatosaurus bones and set out to determine the rate at which the dinosaur had grown. Curry-Rogers realized that the interior of the bones contain a record of the animal's growth. So, she prepared a bone slice one tenth of a millimeter thick and looked at it under a microscope. If the animal had grown slowly, patterns created by the blood vessels in the bone 2) (arrange) in an orderly fashion.

But Curry-Rogers discovered that placement of the vessels was irregular. She now suggests that Apatosaurus 3) (reach) its full size in as few as 10 to 12 years.

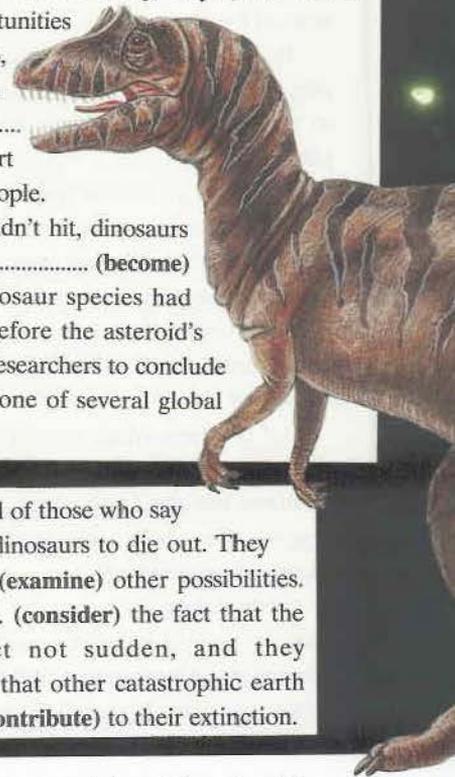

Many experts think that dinosaurs 4) (wipe) out by an asteroid that is known to have hit Mexico 65 million years ago, triggering a tsunami, earthquakes, wildfires and massive amounts of dust. The dust 5) (block) out the sun for many years, causing a dramatic drop in temperature. This 6) (affect) the whole food chain, creating a hostile environment for all living creatures the world over.

In a world where an asteroid whizzed past Earth instead of crashing down with the force of 100 million tons of TNT, life 7) (progress) very differently. Sixty-five million years ago, some of the animals and plants that are common today were just getting started. These include placental mammals and flowering plants. Insects that rely on flowers, such as bees, were also relatively new. Many of these life forms thrived after the mass extinction of 65 million years ago, and without mass extinction to clear their way, they 8) (not/find) ecological opportunities to survival. In this scenario, the world emerging from this event 9) (be) full of reptiles and short on mammals – including people.

But even if the asteroid hadn't hit, dinosaurs and other life forms 10) (become) extinct anyway. Some dinosaur species had started to decrease long before the asteroid's impact. This has led most researchers to conclude that the asteroid was just one of several global catastrophes.

Some scientists are critical of those who say that the asteroid caused dinosaurs to die out. They say they 11) (examine) other possibilities. They 12) (consider) the fact that the extinction was in fact not sudden, and they 13) (accept) that other catastrophic earth events 14) (contribute) to their extinction.

2 Complete these conclusions that can be drawn from the texts with the correct past modal verb in a positive or negative form.

- 1 Dinosaurs died out 65 million years ago.
- 2 It seems that dinosaurs become full size in only a few years.
- 3 An enormous asteroid hitting the earth caused problems for creatures living 65 million years ago.
- 4 A prolonged lack of sun resulted in the death of plants and animals.
- 5 All evidence considered before a theory for dinosaur extinction was proposed.
- 6 Without the lack of competition created by mass extinction some new plant species survived.
- 7 There's no doubt that a series of catastrophic climatic events killed off the dinosaurs eventually.
- 8 We don't know exactly what it was that made the dinosaurs extinct.
- 9 Scientists examined more data before suggesting that the asteroid theory was correct.
- 10 Humans developed if the dinosaurs had not been wiped out.

EXAM FOCUS

Questions 1-14

You should spend about 20 minutes on Questions 1-14.

Can Animals Sense Earthquakes?

The belief that animals can predict earthquakes has been around for centuries.

In 373 B.C., historians recorded that animals, including rats, snakes and weasels, deserted the Greek city of Helice in the thousands just days before a quake devastated the place.

Accounts of similar animal anticipation of earthquakes have surfaced across the centuries. Catfish moving violently, chickens that stop laying eggs and bees leaving their hive in a panic have been reported. Countless pet owners claim to have witnessed their cats and dogs acting strangely before the ground shook—barking or whining for no apparent reason, or showing signs of nervousness and restlessness.

But precisely what animals sense, if they feel anything at all, is a mystery. One theory is that wild and domestic creatures feel the Earth vibrate before humans. Other ideas suggest they detect electrical changes in the air or gas released from the Earth.

Earthquakes are a sudden phenomenon. Seismologists have no way of knowing exactly when or where the next one will hit. An estimated 500,000 detectable quakes occur in the world each year. Of those, 100,000 can be felt by humans, and 100 cause damage.

One of the world's most earthquake-prone countries is Japan, where devastation has taken countless lives and caused enormous damage to property. Researchers there have long studied animals in hopes of discovering what they hear or feel before the Earth shakes in order to use that sense as a prediction tool.

American seismologists, on the other hand, are sceptical. Even though there have been documented cases of strange animal behaviour prior to earthquakes, the United States Geological Survey, a government agency that provides scientific information about the Earth, says a reproducible connection between a specific behaviour and the occurrence of a quake has never been made.

"What we're faced with is a lot of anecdotes," said Andy

Michael, a geophysicist at USGS. "Animals react to so many things—being hungry, defending their territories, mating, predators—so it's hard to have a controlled study to get that advanced warning signal."

In the 1970s, a few studies on animal prediction were done by the USGS "but nothing concrete came out of it," said Michael. Since that time the agency has made no further investigations into the theory.

Erratic Behaviour in Dogs

Researchers around the world continue to pursue the idea, however. In September 2003, a medical doctor in Japan made headlines with a study that indicated erratic behaviour in dogs, such as excessive barking or biting, could be used to forecast quakes.

There have also been examples where authorities have forecast successfully a major earthquake, based in part on the observation of the strange antics of animals. For example, in 1975 Chinese officials ordered the evacuation of Haicheng, a city with one million people, just days before a 7.3-magnitude quake. Only a small portion of the population was hurt or killed. If the city had not been evacuated, it is estimated that the number of fatalities and injuries could have exceeded 150,000.

It was later discovered, though, that a rare series of small tremors, called foreshocks, occurred before the large quake hit the city. Still, the Chinese have continued to look at animal behaviour as an aid to earthquake prediction. "They have had several notable successes and also a few false alarms," said Rupert Sheldrake, a biologist and author of the books, Dogs that Know When Their Owners Are Coming Home and The Sense of Being Stared At.

Questions 1-5

Do the following statements agree with the views of the writer in the reading passage?

Write

- YES if the statement agrees with the views of the writer
- NO if the statement contradicts the views of the writer
- NOT GIVEN if it is impossible to say what the writer thinks about this

- 1 A wide variety of animals have been used as early warning systems for earthquakes.
- 2 A large number of pets have been killed in earthquakes.
- 3 Scientists can explain how animals predict earthquakes.
- 4 People notice few of the earthquakes that happen.
- 5 Researchers all over the world believe animals are able to predict earthquakes.

Questions 6-9

Complete the summary with words A-K from the box below. Write the correct letters for your answers.

Research into animals predicting earthquakes has taken place in many countries with 6) results. In the US they found no 7) link between animal behaviour and earthquakes. In Japan, however, it was concluded that certain types of 8) behaviour in dogs could be linked to subsequent earthquakes. In China the 9) evacuation of a town took place, saving many lives after it was noted that animals were behaving in a peculiar way.

SKILLS FOCUS

- 1 Look at this prize-winning essay on global issues from school student Leon Zhang in the Bosch Technology Horizons competition. Four topic sentences have been removed from the beginning of paragraphs and four summary/evaluative sentences from the end of paragraphs. Match missing sentences A-H to gaps 1-8. Think about how the parts of the sentences in bold link to what comes before or after.

Take this time to think, for just a moment. In the past second, one and a half acres of rainforest were cut down, destroying the homes of many species of wildlife. In the past minute, the energy used in the UK was equal to 313 million tons of oil, which we can never get back. In the past hour, 160 children died from lack of access to safe drinking water and sanitation.

Mother Earth is in deep trouble. And it is our duty to get her out of it.

1 Melting polar ice caps, rising temperatures, the economic crisis – it seems we cannot escape. The media has done its fair share emphasising the problem. Yet, there is a bright side. Our greatest strength as human beings is the ability to think. 2

3 In one of the hottest places on Earth, water is in scarce supply. Up to 250 million Africans could live in water-stressed areas by next year, and more than 50 per cent of Africans suffer from water-related diseases such as cholera and infant diarrhoea. However, there are solutions. Engineering has already produced breakthroughs. By pressurising sea water to produce vapour jets and filtering them through carbon nano-tubes, we can get clean drinking water from sea water – an almost inexhaustible resource. 4

5 One of its most ambitious plans is to build a working space solar power system by 2030. By drawing on the colossal energy of the sun, it could meet the entire world's electricity requirements indefinitely without nuclear or Green House Gas emissions. It sounds like a space-age dream, doesn't it? If successful, the impact on the world would be monumental. It would mean energy for schools, hospitals, and homes. 6

7 We are finally entering an era where engineering and technology are making the world a better place. Take the time to think, for just a moment. 8

- A Every day, people everywhere are doing their bit, from recycling newspapers at home, to developing hydrogen-powered fuel cell cars in a lab.
 B It would mean another industrial revolution.
 C Japan has long been renowned for its mind-blowing technological advances that are often years ahead of the rest of the world.
 D Now stop, and think towards the future.

- E The problems our Earth faces can affect us all.
 F One prime example is finding solutions to water problems in developing countries such as Africa.
 G We can try to put a stop to these global dilemmas.
 H It may sound complex, but such engineering feats can save millions of lives, not just in Africa but all over the planet.

2 Look at these two jumbled paragraphs. Think about these aspects of how paragraphs develop:

- Topic sentence
- Evidence/Example/Explanation
- Summarising/Evaluative sentence

Identify the topic sentence in each paragraph below and then arrange the sentences into a logical order.

A

- It is estimated that 1000 million people will be born during this decade.
- By and large, the biggest increases will occur in the poorest countries – those societies least equipped to meet the needs of the new arrivals and invest in their future.
- Today, the situation looks less promising since progress made toward reducing birth rates has been slower than expected.
- Not long ago, in 1984, it seemed as if the rate of population growth was slowing everywhere except in Africa and parts of southern Asia.
- The world's population, now 5300 million, is increasing by approximately 250000 people every day.

- Women rarely participate other than in limited ways in shaping their countries' economic and social policies.
- Their place in managing resources and crop production has yet to be recognized by most governments.
- Overall, women are responsible for half the food production in developing countries.
- Successful policies will secure women's involvement from the beginning and will also make sure that development does not simply mean more work for them.
- The time and energy required of women for cultivation and harvesting, food processing and preparation as well as the fetching of fuel are not mentioned in national labour statistics.

3 Now using the pattern:

- Topic sentence
- Evidence/Example/Explanation
- Summarising/Evaluative sentence

complete these two paragraphs with your own ideas.

1 The most serious social issue facing my country is

.....

2 The most pressing environmental concern in my country is

GRAMMAR FOCUS: Defining/Non-defining relative clauses

- 1 Look at this extract from a student essay on the causes and consequences of overcrowding in cities. Rewrite each paragraph correcting the errors highlighted and add any missing words. The errors are all related to relative clauses.

(^ = something missing)

There are many reasons which people are moving from rural to urban areas. The main reason, however, in the developing world is the desire to escape the poverty who it exists outside of cities. Rural communities ^ are lacking basic services are hard places to live especially for young people who's prospects are few. It is these young people ^ they head for cities often hoping to make money where they can send it back home.

The problem is that very often the city lights ^ shine from a distance hide the overcrowded slums at where these young people will have to live. Young people which have only ever known rural life will almost certainly meet criminal elements who they are keen to exploit them. These people who their lives were probably once similar to the lives of the young people what they are now threatening and exploiting, just make the problem worse. They open the door to the city just wide enough to let people in then trap them inside lives that it destroys their dreams.

- 2 Match one of these words about the environment to the definitions below.

- natural resources • conservation • greenhouse effect
- pollution • habitat • smog • ecosystem • poacher
- atmosphere • endangered species • insecticide • extinction
- recycling • evolution • renewable energy

Complete each definition with a relative pronoun (who, whose, which, that, whom, or where) or a relative pronoun and a preposition.

1	any naturally occurring source of energy such as solar, wind, wave and hydroelectric power, is not derived from fossil or nuclear fuel
2	a plant or animal is in danger of becoming extinct
3	a material such as timber, fresh water, or a mineral deposit occurring in a natural state economic value can be gained
4	the process organisms continually adapt to their environments e.g. through natural selection or hybridization
5	the point an animal species no longer exists
6	the warming trend in the lower atmosphere of a planet, is believed to occur when solar radiation is trapped
7	the natural environment a plant or animal lives
8	a substance is used to kill insects

12	a person illegally hunts animals
13	contaminating material harms some aspect of the environment
14	a haze caused by the effect of sunlight on foggy air has been polluted by vehicle exhaust gases and industrial smoke
15	the act of a person aim is to preserve or protect the environment

EXAM FOCUS

1 Look at the essay question and make a short plan of what you would include in your answer.

As the planet faces the threat of global warming, technology rather than government intervention is our best hope of creating a sustainable future.

To what extent do you agree or disagree?

Look at the opening of this student answer to the above question. The teacher underlined eleven parts of it. Match one of the comments to an underlined part of the essay according to what you think needs improving in each case.

Is there hope of creating a sustainable future? According to my opinion the world is heading for a disaster. As the planet heats up, more and more of the delicate ecosystems which we depend are lost and human populations are threatened by floods, droughts and food shortages. We can stop this process but we need many actions and we need them now.
So let's consider some solutions. I do not agree that governments can do nothing to slow climate warming and but it is true that we need to make better use of renewable resources.

Interviewer: OK lets talk a little bit about travelling. What is the best means of transport for getting around in your city?

Candidate: Er ... er ... Transport means you move around a place by bus or car ... something like that ... in my city there is a lot of traffic so ... it is difficult to move around ...

Interviewer: Tell me about any travel plans you have made for the holidays?

Candidate: I am going to visit my sister ... she lives in another town which is far from here ... I am going with all my family ...

Exercise 3, p. 9

- 1 Is the place you live in quiet or busy?
 - 2 What sort of accommodation do you live in?
 - 3 What is there to do in the evenings where you live?
 - 4 OK so let's talk about your free time. How often do you go to the cinema?
 - 5 Does physical exercise help you to relax?
 - 6 Do you spend a lot of your free-time on the Internet?
 - 7 Tell me about one of your hobbies?
- OK so let's talk a little ... [fade]

2 – Travelling

VOCABULARY FOCUS

Exercise 4, p. 11

Arriving at the airport

Airports, especially large ones, can seem very confusing for a first-time traveller. Do not worry; when you learn the routines you will be fine. There are many things to do at airports but remember your most important goals: checking in, entering the security area and boarding the plane.

Arrive in good time at the airport

Everything takes time at the airport: check-in, security control, shopping, eating, whatever. Your airline can tell you when to arrive at the airport (usually 1 hour before the plane leaves). As a first time traveller, you should arrive half an hour or an hour before the recommended 'latest time'?

Larger airports have many terminals and quite often, the distances between them are long. It's important to arrive at the right terminal. Your travel itinerary usually says what terminal your plane will depart from. If you're unsure, contact the airport, your travel agent or your airline.

Have your travel documents available

You need to present your travel documents frequently at the airport. Important travel documents might be: passport or other identification, tickets (if you have paper tickets), boarding card (given to you at check-in) and your travel itinerary (not important but very useful).

Navigate yourself

When you arrive in the departure area, your first mission is to find your check-in desk. Some airports have screens showing what desk you should check-in at, while at other airports you will have to look for your airline's notice board. If you arrive early and can't find where you need to check-in, it might be that the check-in for your route has not started. You may also need to queue if there are a lot of people travelling, so do get to the airport in plenty of time.

SKILLS FOCUS

Exercise 1, p. 12

Listen to the recording and underline which of the two sets of words/phrases the speaker says.

- 1 He can't speak Mandarin.
- 2 Do you really like chips?
- 3 I only drive when it's light.
- 4 What's the time?
- 5 I'll have a go.
- 6 These shops.
- 7 You and me and my brother.
- 8 I wasn't ill.
- 9 I would've come.
- 10 They'll travel by train.

Exercise 3, p. 12

What words do these letters spell? Write the letters down, then say the word.

- 1 D-E-S-T-I-N-A-T-I-O-N
- 2 I-L-L-E-G-A-L
- 3 B-O-A-R-D-I-N-G C-A-R-D
- 4 G-A-T-E
- 5 X-hyphen-R-A-Y M-A-C-H-I-N-E
- 6 G-O-O-D-S
- 7 D-U-T-Y F-R-E-E
- 8 L-O-U-N-G-E
- 9 F-O-R-E-I-G-N C-U-R-R-E-N-C-Y
- 10 C-R-E-D-I-T C-A-R-D-S

And the answers are: 1 destination, 2 illegal, 3 boarding card, 4 gate, 5 X-ray machine, 6 goods, 7 duty free, 8 lounge, 9 foreign currency, and 10 credit cards. Did you get them right?

OK, and now for a test of your numbers. Write the numbers down and work out the sums.

- 11 77 equals 27 plus how much?
- 12 15 equals 10 plus how much?
- 13 163 equals 101 plus how much?
- 14 1,792 equals 1,702 plus how much?
- 15 11, 549 equals 11, 400 plus how much?

Tapescripts

These last ones are a bit different ... listen

- 16 500 minus 200 equals how much?
 17 1,402 minus 312 equals how much?
 18 27,926 minus 216 equals how much?
 19 17 minus 9 equals how much?
 20 100 minus 63 equals how much?

And now for the answers:

The answer to number 11 is 50, number 12 is 5, number 13 is 62, number 14 is 90, that's 90, and number 15 is 149. And the answers to the last questions: Number 16 is 300, number 17 is 1,090, number 18 is 27,710, number 19 is 8 and number 20 is 37. OK?

EXAM FOCUS

p. 15

You will hear a travel agent and a traveller talking about flights to Singapore and accommodation there.

Travel agent: So, you want a single ticket to Singapore in March, is that right?

Traveller: Yes, I'd like to get there just before Easter.

Travel agent: OK, I'll just have a look. Right, the best prices are $394 with Malaysian Airlines or $270 with Garuda. The Garuda flight's cheaper 'cos it takes longer – it stops on the way but the Malaysian one's direct. It only takes 2 hours.

Traveller: Is Garuda much longer?

Travel agent: Yes, about 5 hours, because it makes two stop-overs in fact.

Traveller: Well, that'd be OK. I'm not in a great hurry, and it's a lot cheaper.

Travel agent: The problem is you might miss your hostel booking with that flight. You'd get there a day later, and this hostel we've found takes Sunday to Sunday bookings only.

Traveller: Mm, so save on a cheaper flight, or lose my hostel? Oh, that's OK. There must be another hostel for those dates.

Travel agent: Well, let's have another look. Right, OK, there is something, the Welcome Hostel, but it's right out on the East coast, which is very good for the airport, but quite a way from the centre.

Traveller: Oh, that doesn't matter. I can catch a bus or something. I think transport's really good in Singapore. What can you tell me about the hostel?

Travel agent: Well, it's 30 Singaporean dollars a night – that's about £10, or 20 US. You get a single room with breakfast and you have to share a bathroom. And there's a coffee shop.

Traveller: Sounds good to me. Let's go for it. Oh, actually, I forgot to mention – can I pay by travellers' cheque? Someone stole my credit card.

Travel agent: Oh no, what happened?

Traveller: Well, I'm not sure really, I'd just had a drink in Just Coffee and was walking along the street ... I was getting my camera out 'cos I wanted to take a picture of the Dyson Building ... it's so fantastic.

Travel agent: Yeh, it sure is.

Traveller: Anyway, I was just walking down that street behind it – you get a great view of it from there – I'd just turned the corner as I wanted to go to the Museum, when I suddenly felt a hand in my pocket, then saw this guy run off straight back down the street. He must have had someone working with him 'cos then I saw two of them running into the mall.

Travel agent: You mean the one next to the Dyson Building?

Traveller: No, further down on the street I was on the other side of the park, the one at the end ...

Travel agent: Oh, you'd never find them in there. It's enormous.

Traveller: Oh, I didn't even try ... I was OK, and I just rang my bank straight away, so in fact they didn't get anything. But I'm still waiting for my new card.

SKILLS FOCUS

Exercise 1, p. 30

Well I have always lived in this area ... near the coast ... and I have always been interested in the sea and particularly in fishing and seafood. What I mean is I try and go out on a fishing boat whenever I can and I love learning how to cook what we catch.

It was my uncle who first got me involved. He used to be a commercial fisherman and then when he stopped work he got a smaller boat which he took me out in and basically my aunt was always cooking things like lobster, shark or seaweed which I love. I suppose it was my stomach that got me really interested. My aunt makes fantastic bouillabaisse – it's like a mixture of everything you find in the Mediterranean. Anyway, through my uncle I met people who work on larger fishing boats and they sometimes let me go out with them. I also do jobs for them and I am paid in fish ... last week, for instance, I was helping clean the underside of a boat. It was the captain of that boat who some time ago got me thinking about studying marine biology or maritime studies and that's why I am taking IELTS. I want to go to Holland to study.

I'd say that I would recommend fishing to others, especially in an area like this, because the sea is fascinating and it's great to do something in different seasons outdoors ... and seafood is just great.

6 – Accommodation

VOCABULARY FOCUS

Exercise 3, p. 34

Residential colleges or similar purpose-built residences for students, normally provide a single bedroom with study desk, wardrobe, shared bathrooms and a shared common room. Some colleges provide meals, students with special dietary requirements need to enquire whether the college can cater for their dietary requirements. Some college residences provide kitchen facilities for students to cook their own meals. Our college accommodation starts from $290.00 per week.

There is also accommodation near our college site. This accommodation is a six-storey, 450-bed complex. It caters for a range of student needs from one-bedroom units with their own kitchen, lounge and bathroom, through to shared apartments with up to five lockable bedrooms surrounding a common kitchen, lounge and bathrooms. All apartments are fully furnished and have been designed with students in mind. Prices start from $211.00 per week, per room in a 5 or 6 person shared apartment.

Student Lodges and Hostels are similar to residential colleges, but are not located on or necessarily near the grounds of a college. An established weekly/fortnightly/semester fee is charged for either a single room or twin share (two people per room). Smaller hostels may have only nine people in one house, with larger hostels accommodating more than thirty people in one building. Some hostels cater for female or male students only, while others offer a mixed-living environment. All places have a communal bathroom, kitchen, dining room, and living room. It is common for meals to be provided, but there are facilities available where you can do your own cooking. Prices for hostels that provide meals start from $200.00 per week.

Tapescripts

Exercise 5, p. 35

- 1 What do you put across windows to keep the light out?
- 2 Which room do most people cook in?
- 3 What's the name of the appliance people cook on?
- 4 What machine do you use to keep a room cool?
- 5 What piece of furniture do you hang clothes in?
- 6 What do you put your mobile phone charger into when you want to use it?
- 7 What should you throw rubbish into in your room?
- 8 What's the name of the cheap accommodation where there are lots of beds in a long room?
- 9 What's the machine you use to clean floors and carpets?
- 10 What's the opposite of 'downstairs'?
- 11 What's the thing you put on your bed to keep you warm?
- 12 What's the part of the house behind the front door? It's not really a room.
- 13 What's the machine you use to clean dirty clothes?
- 14 What's that nice soft thing you rest your head on in bed?
- 15 Where can you wash if you don't use a bath or a basin?

SKILLS FOCUS

Exercise 1, p. 36

Listen to the recording and tick (✓) which of the two sentences the speaker says. Listen carefully!

- 1 The kitchen is so cold.
- 2 I'd prefer a large room with air conditioning.
- 3 I would've paid in that situation.
- 4 How did you switch it on?
- 5 The bus stopped outside the house.
- 6 You don't smoke, do you?
- 7 You shouldn't pay your rent now.
- 8 The flat's near Green Park.
- 9 I'd like a cheap rent in shared accommodation.

Exercise 2, p. 36

Listen to the recording. Match the paraphrases you hear to the sentences below. Write the correct number of the paraphrase in the boxes.

- 1 It's quite near – just down that street over there.
- 2 I've lost all my valuables.
- 3 I got luggage that was easy to carry.
- 4 We couldn't hear him.
- 5 They arrived together.
- 6 The rule is lights out by 12 o'clock.
- 7 She never has breakfast out.
- 8 What's your address?

Exercise 3, p. 36

Speaker 1: I don't want to have to go out and buy any furniture.

Speaker 2: I'd rather live with other people.

Speaker 3: The flat isn't near the centre of town.

Speaker 4: You'll need to pay something like $300 per month.

Speaker 5: You'll have to bring your own bedding.

Speaker 6: Think hard about what you'd want a housemate to be like.

Speaker 7: There are significant differences between renting a house and living in halls of residence.

Speaker 8: There are reduced costs if sharing.

Speaker 9: You may experience difficulties if you don't understand your contract.

Speaker 10: Finding the right accommodation is a personal and individual choice.

EXAM FOCUS

p. 39

You will hear a man leaving a telephone message for a friend about a hotel he is recommending.

Hi Arun, listen I'm returning your call. I'll leave a long message in case I can't catch you before you go. I'm going away myself tomorrow. Right, well, you say you're going to Sydney next month and want to know about where I stayed when I was there.

Well, the place I stayed in was good, but it was pretty basic. I hope you don't want anything smart. If you just want something cheap and clean, then this is the place for you. It was very clean, but there are no rooms. It's just a dormitory really, and nothing much else was provided – sheets, a blanket, a shared shower, that's all I think.

It wasn't that expensive, and depending on how long you stayed, I think it got cheaper ... $25 dollars a night and $150 a week, or something like that.

Now if you want to contact them, it's the Duchenny in Bondi. Yes, that's right, Bondi as in Bondi Beach. So, it's great for swimming and surfing and hanging out. I'll give you the name again ... The Duchenny – that's D – U – C – H – E – N – N – E – Y. Its on Macquarie Street, 13, Macquarie Street, and their phone number is ... where is it? Oh yes, 61, that's 61 for Australia, right? So, 612 9361 8517. There was this really nice guy who worked there. Try and speak to him. His name was ... aaah, I can't remember. Never mind, I'll find his email and send it to you.

But why don't we try and meet up before you go? I'm leaving at 6 tomorrow evening, catching the Indian Pacific, so yeh, going by train for a change. So, this evening would be fine – any time. I've got a new mobile number by the way – the old one? It got stolen. It's 923712647. OK, cheers. Oh, and let's meet up there too.

9 – Free time and entertainment

EXAM FOCUS

Exercise 2, p. 57

Candidate A

Examiner: So Miguel, let's first discuss spending time with friends. What would you say are the best ways to keep in touch with friends?

Miguel: Well, it depends. If they live near you, I think you have to make time to see them. I know from my own experience if you don't make time to do things together ... you'll lose touch. That's why I've always tried to get friends round or go out with friends about twice a week. But if your friends live a long way away, I think you have to use things like the Internet and Facebook ...

Examiner: But don't you think young people perhaps overuse that kind of thing?

Miguel: No, I don't think so. People who say that's all kids do are wrong. Young people actually use technology so much because they have a lot of things going on in their lives. That's the way things are today.

Tapescripts

Examiner: And what would you say are the types of things that can test a friendship?

Miguel: A lot of things. I think you always hope that friends won't lie to you, and of course you expect them to keep in touch ... but I suppose if a friend didn't support you at a difficult time, you would wonder whether he was your friend. That's how I feel about my friends at least. [fade...]

Candidate B

Examiner: So let's talk about how children spend their free time. Tell me Sasha, do you think children spend too much time watching TV?

Sasha: Children watch TV too much. It's bad for their eyes and their body and they don't go and play outside.

Examiner: And what do you think their parents can do?

Sasha: Parents can stop the TV. My parents, they sometimes stop the TV for my sister and tell her: 'Hey, go and do something with your friends.'

Examiner: And what sort of clubs do you think children should be encouraged to join?

Sasha: Join ... er ... um ... maybe dancing clubs ... dancing is good for their body and they go outside so they are not always at home.

Examiner: And how does membership of a club help children?

Sasha: They make friends ... go outside ... and learn new things which are good for them at school. [fade...]

Exercise 4, p. 58

- | | |
|-----------------|-------------------|
| 1 businessman | 7 design |
| 2 resources | 8 lecture |
| 3 industrial | 9 dentistry |
| 4 administrator | 10 headmistress |
| 5 accountant | 11 mechanical |
| 6 tourist | 12 transportation |

Exercise 7, p. 59

- I don't know ... it's great, it's fun, but you never know from one week to the next if you'll have a job in a month's time.
- All you do every day is just put things into files, look things up on the computer, enter figures onto spreadsheets – you do the same thing every day.
- It's so interesting and fulfilling but I just can't go on with it – I can hardly afford to pay my rent.
- We start at 11 in the morning, which is good, then go straight through till 5pm, then have a little break, then go through till midnight, so it's pretty tiring.
- I was amazed ... in four weeks I got enough to pay off all my debts, to rent a new flat and buy a computer. Don't know what I'm going to do with all of next month's salary!
- It constantly pushes me and makes me think. I have to question and test everything I do ... I really like that. It makes you very good at things.
- I know that from now on I'll never have to look for another job ... it's a great feeling knowing that they can never give you the sack.
- I think the manager thinks I'm quite good at what I do and it's a big firm with lots of branches all over the place, so I'm sort of hoping that it'll offer me all kinds of opportunities.

- Yes, it's OK ... the money isn't bad, and it isn't very demanding, but I just think that if I'm not careful I'll be doing the same thing I'm doing now in twenty years time. What's the point of that?
- Honestly, I'm just so lucky ... all I have to do is hand out information to passers-by, and answer their questions, if they have any ... which they never do. Really I could do it with my eyes closed.

SKILLS FOCUS

Exercise 1, p. 60

Speaker 1: You haven't really left your job, have you?

Speaker 2: I told you to do it immediately not by tomorrow morning!

Speaker 3: They wrote me a letter and phoned me. I really think I've got the job.

Speaker 4: There's so much to do. I just don't see how I can manage it in the time I've got.

Speaker 5: I need to finish this before I go home tonight and install a new computer programme.

Exercise 2, p. 60

Speaker 1: I've looked everywhere, and goodness knows how many application forms I've sent in. It really isn't looking very good.

Speaker 2: It was awful. He just kept asking me all these questions non-stop, and he didn't give me a chance to answer.

Speaker 3: I'll need to get there really early, and the night before I'll do a practice interview. And, I'll wear that new suit of course.

Speaker 4: It's just the sort of thing I'm interested in ... just found it when I was looking through the paper.

Speaker 5: This is the nineteenth form I've filled in this month – it's all so time consuming, and costly.

Speaker 6: What ... I don't believe it ... listen to this ... they're offering me the job!

Exercise 3, p. 60

Speaker 1: Sometimes they've been injured but often they're sick just like humans. We need to check them over and find the right treatment. It's not always easy because they can't talk, of course.

Speaker 2: I help out mainly. Materials come in and I have to unload them and store them, then I have to give the right tools to the builders and keep everything clean. Sometimes I do some heavy work like lifting and digging.

Speaker 3: We generally look after the patients. That means washing them and making sure they're clean, giving them their medicines and, of course, going to them if they ring for us.

Speaker 4: I was really nervous at the beginning having to talk to so many people, but PowerPoint is a real help, and also many of the students are really quite interested, which makes a difference.

Speaker 5: I organise things mainly, type letters, answer emails and the phone. If you have a good boss, it can be really challenging.

Speaker 6: You need to be nice to people basically, and give them the help they need. You have to deal with all the people that come up to the desk, then direct them to the right person.

Exercise 4, p. 60

Paula: I'm thinking of changing my job ... like to get a new one.

Bill: Are you sure that's wise ... a job is a job, and they're hard to find at the moment.

Paula: Yes, but I need more money.

Tapescripts

Bill: Do you enjoy it?

Paula: Actually I think it's great ... the hours are good, I'm given lots of freedom to do things how I want ... and, of course, it's all about cinema, which I love ... oh, I really don't know what to think.

Bill: You know all those surveys they do of job satisfaction?

Paula: Go on, tell me ...

Bill: Well, all those I've read say the same thing really ... that what matters most of all is liking what you do, being interested in it.

Paula: Yes, but I would like more money.

Bill: Well, they say that money doesn't matter so much really, providing of course that it gives you enough to live on. What about your boss? Do you get on with her? They say that's pretty important.

Paula: Yeh, she's fine ... really helpful in fact; she's always giving me good things to do.

Bill: And the other people?

Paula: They're great ... we all help one another; there's none of that competition and gossip that you get in some places; and we often go out together, so in fact they've sort of become friends.

Bill: Right ... well, they say that interest in the job, feeling supported by your boss and getting on with your co-workers are key, so it sounds as if you'd be mad to change, but it's up to you of course. Maybe the best thing is to think about what's really important to you at the moment ... money or job satisfaction.

EXAM FOCUS

p. 63

You will hear two people talking about a survey they need to carry out at the town's new airport.

Rudi: So, we really must decide who's doing what.

Jess: Yes, we haven't got much time left.

Rudi: Well, why don't we go up there tomorrow and just interview everyone who comes past.

Jess: I don't know – we won't have time, and also we need a mix of people. Shouldn't we have equal percentages of men, women, elderly, young and foreign nationals and locals?

Rudi: Oh yes, we've got to make the population representative. Let's think, how are we going to do that?

Jess: Well, we could each keep a count of the kind of people we've interviewed and make sure we get a balance.

Rudi: Yes, and maybe we could text one another after about an hour to say what mix of people we've had.

Jess: Good idea. So, let's sort out who's doing what. We're both interviewing, right?

Rudi: Yes, and you can go and see the airport manager to make sure he'll let us interview, while I go and buy us some drinks. Then at the end you can give me the forms to take home and input. I don't mind doing that.

Jess: That would be great – you're much quicker on the computer than me.

Rudi: But let's analyse all the data together so we don't make any mistakes.

Jess: Yeh, OK. Actually, I'm quite looking forward to it. It'll be interesting to see what people say. And we can get to practise our interviewing skills, which should be useful for when we're on the other end being interviewed ourselves.

Rudi: Yes, and analysing and presenting our findings should be good too. You know that nowadays you have to give presentations when you apply for some jobs, so again it's useful job application practice. In fact, why don't we ask the others for feedback – both on what we've found out and on how well we've presented. That could be really useful.

Jess: Hmm, you're a brave man. I'm not too keen but I suppose you're right, actually. They could give us some useful tips. But let's give them a questionnaire to fill in, shall we, so that we can direct what they say – I don't want just to hear a load of negative criticism.

Rudi: You don't need to be so worried about what they'll say. They'll give us lots of help, I'm sure, but a questionnaire would be a good idea. OK, so we're ready. See you outside the Grand Café at 2 tomorrow, and don't forget the forms.

Jess: Don't worry, I won't.

13 – Modern living

VOCABULARY FOCUS

Exercise 2, p. 79

Journalist: So Mark, how did you decide to lead a life without money?

Mark: I suppose my decision to give up money – not just cash but credit cards too – was made seven years ago, when I stumbled upon a DVD about Gandhi.

Journalist: Tell me more ...

Mark: Well he said we should "be the change we want to see in the world". I realised then that working for an organic food company as I was doing would never be quite enough. I mean the organic food industry, though not twenty-four-seven junk food living, was part of the conventional system it was trying to change ... that is ... excess plastic packaging, massive food miles, big businesses and restaurant chains buying up little ones.

Journalist: So what did you do?

Mark: Well I found a caravan that someone else didn't want any more and I volunteered at weekends at an organic farm near Bristol in return for a place to park it.

Journalist: So what do you live on?

Mark: Well, for food I grow my own, collect it in the forest and swap what I grow for other things I need.

Journalist: And what about cooking without gas or electricity?

Mark: Well ... cooking outside has become one of the joys of my life. I now can't think of anything better than marvelling at the world at sunrise and sunset while preparing my daily meals. Birds in the trees around my kitchen have become my iPod, and observing wildlife has taught me much more about nature than any documentary I've seen on any HD screen.

Journalist: And how do you manage without other technology?

Mark: Well I did spend money (about £360) before beginning the experiment on a solar panel to supply me with enough electricity for a light, my laptop and mobile phone – I can only receive calls. The panel has always provided light – but in winter my phone and Internet access time were severely restricted – which was frustrating.

Journalist: So what other drawbacks are there of moneyless living?

Mark: Everything takes much more time. Hand-washing clothes, for instance, using laundry liquid made by boiling up some nuts doesn't bother me but it can take two hours and finding stuff in rubbish bins – such as the steamer I cook with – takes far longer than popping to the local shopping centre for one.

Journalist: And what about transport?

Mark: Cycling the 36-mile round-trip to Bristol takes a lot more time and energy than driving or catching a bus, but it's also an economical alternative to my old gym subscription or getting a personal trainer, and much more enjoyable than using a car with satellite navigation.

Journalist: So what's been the best part of the experience?

Mark: Well I'd much rather spend time making my own bread outdoors than playing on a game console ... I suppose where money once gave me a sense of security, I now find that in friends and the local community. Some of my closest friends are people I've only met because I had to build real relationships based on trust and kindness, not money.

SKILLS FOCUS

Exercise 3, p. 80

- 1 Interviewer: Do you prefer modern or traditional music from your country?
Student: It depends ... on my I-pod I have mostly modern stuff ... a lot of it by foreign bands and singers but I do often listen to more classical folk music too ... especially when I am studying.
- 2 Interviewer: How often do you get out with friends?
Student: Not as much as I'd like ... all my friends are studying for their exams this year so it is difficult to find time and I also have a part-time weekend job ... but I always try and see friends on Fridays or Saturdays.
- 3 Interviewer: What special occasions do families celebrate together in your country?
Student: Apart from religious festivals, it's mainly birthdays and anniversaries ... we usually have big meals together if it's someone's birthday and in my family we always celebrate my parents wedding anniversary by going out for a meal.
- 4 Interviewer: What piece of technology do you value most?
Student: The microwave, definitely ... I don't have time to cook and I love junk food so meals for me need to be fast and I usually eat on-the-go either at my computer or going out the door.
- 5 Interviewer: Where do you go shopping?
Student: I can't stand shopping ... so I try to avoid it as much as possible ... if I do need things I try to go somewhere where I can get everything all at once like a mega store or a mall.
- 6 Interviewer: When do you typically use the computer?
Student: Twenty-four seven ... the computer is never off in my house ... if I am not using my own computer for homework or just for me, I am usually doing something for my parents on theirs.
- 7 Interviewer: Do you still write letters?
Student: Not really ... I would never write a letter to a friend ... only text or e-mail ... and I think everything official I've done recently like applications and complaints I've done online ...
- 8 Interviewer: Would you like to live abroad?
Student: I hope to study abroad ... so the answer is definitely yes ... what could be better as a young person than the chance to experience another country and culture for a year or two but I am not sure I would want to move abroad permanently ...
- 9 Interviewer: Is going to the cinema popular in your country?
Student: It used to be ... but I think things have changed ... young people won't wait any more for a film to come to the cinema and they download it at home instead ...
- 10 Interviewer: What is an ideal holiday for you?
Student: Something completely different ... I mean doing something in a new place that I don't do everyday ... Holidays for me are not about relaxing but about adventure and new experiences ...

Exercise 4, p. 80

- 1 Interviewer: Do you prefer modern or traditional music from your country?
Student: It depends ... on my I-pod I have mostly modern stuff ... a lot of it by foreign bands and singers but I do often listen to more classical folk music too ... especially when I am studying ... I suppose it's all about the mood I'm in.
- 2 Interviewer: How often do you get out with friends?
Student: Not as much as I'd like ... all my friends are studying for their exams this year so it is difficult to find time and I also have a part-time weekend job ... but I always try and see friends on Fridays or Saturdays ... it's often a last minute thing though.
- 3 Interviewer: What special occasions do families celebrate together in your country?
Student: Apart from religious festivals, it's mainly birthdays and anniversaries ... we usually have big meals together if it's someone's birthday and in my family we always celebrate my parents wedding anniversary by going out for a meal ... that's pretty typical where I am from.
- 4 Interviewer: What piece of technology do you value most?
Student: The microwave, definitely ... I don't have time to cook and I love junk food so meals for me need to be fast and I usually eat on-the-go either at my computer or going out the door ... life is just so hectic.
- 5 Interviewer: Where do you go shopping?
Student: I can't stand shopping ... so I try to avoid it as much as possible ... if I do need things I try to go somewhere where I can get everything all at once like a mega store or a mall ... the sooner it's over, the better.
- 6 Interviewer: When do you typically use the computer?
Student: Twenty-four seven ... the computer is never off in my house ... if I am not using my own computer for homework or just for me, I am usually doing something for my parents on theirs ... it's my basic life tool.
- 7 Interviewer: Do you still write letters?
Student: Not really ... I would never write a letter to a friend ... only text or e-mail ... and I think everything official I've done recently like applications and complaints I've done online ... I just think the world has moved on.

- 10 Interviewer: What is an ideal holiday for you?

Exercise 3, p. 82

Q: You're an American writer living in Shanghai, China. How did you end up there?

A: In 2005, my husband said to me, "How would you feel about living in China?"

"China?"

"Mmmhmm, ... my company wants me to go there for a couple of years." Until that moment, I hadn't ever considered living in China. Italy? Sure. Greece? Absolutely. But China?

Still, it did not take me long to make a decision. I was an adventurous writer and a woman in love. Why not move to China? After a few short seconds of consideration, I said, "Sure, let's go."

Five months later we were living in Shanghai. I did not speak a word of Mandarin, did not know a soul, and honestly, did not know much about Chinese culture (other than what I had learnt during our three-day cultural training class). But I was fascinated. I grabbed my Mac and my camera and set off. I had been exploring ... and writing ... ever since. My second book, which came out a few months ago, is about China.

Q: It sounds like you have made a niche for yourself as a writer in China through teaching, writing about your adopted home, and creating a reading series. What do you like most about living in China? Is it a good place to live as a writer?

A: Living in China is this crazy, kooky, wonderful, frustrating, overwhelming, fulfilling, eye-opening, experience. I have lived here for four years now and I'm pretty sure I have found enough material to last a lifetime. Two lifetimes maybe.

Since moving here in 2006, I have been working hard to create a writerly niche for myself in Shanghai, but I have also worked/have also been working hard lately to establish myself as a writer abroad in the larger world community. This is key, especially if you want to someday publish a book in the U.S.

Extract 1

About five years ago I co-taught a course with another teacher who used PowerPoint slides a lot for his lectures. He also handed out copies of the slides before class so students could use them to make notes.

Extract 2

Before that, my own approach to teaching had been very different. I used slides very rarely – only for graphs and pictures that were too complicated to draw on the board. I also had lots of interaction with the class as I didn't feel I needed to 'finish my show' in the time allowed. But to be consistent with my colleague I decided to try out his approach, so from day 1 I used slides (usually about 8-10 per class) and handed out copies of the slides I'd planned to use before class.

Extract 3

After a few weeks I noticed something I'd not seen previously – attendance at my class had dropped to perhaps as low as 50% of the class. And I noticed too that I wasn't interacting as much with the class. I still asked questions and started discussions but I was unwilling to let discussions develop in case I didn't get through the slides I'd planned to cover.

Extract 4

After a few weeks more of this approach, two students came up to me after class and said, in effect 'Dr. Roberts, this class is boring. All we do is read through the slides, which you have already given us. It's just so easy to stop listening to you'. After I'd got over the shock, I asked if they thought they'd get more out of the class and be more engaged if I started using the board again instead. Both said 'yes'.

Extract 5

For the rest of the semester I went back to the board (no slides in or before class), attendance went back up to traditional levels, the class became more interactive, and my teaching evaluations at the end of term were similar to those I'd received previously. Ever since that experience, I have never been tempted to structure my teaching round slides or PowerPoint.

Exercise 4, p. 86

You will hear a college lecturer talking about the value of grammar.

I'd like to talk to you today about 'grammar'. I imagine that many of you are already groaning in boredom, but I'd like to convince you to think about grammar in another, more positive way. What I'd like to look at first is 'what is grammar?', then look at if we all know grammar, next at how we learn it, and finally look at the role of grammar in learning a foreign language.

So, what is grammar? I would say that grammar is simply the way we use patterns and groups of words to make meaning. For example, 'fruit of kind strawberries are a' makes no sense to you. Am I right? But 'strawberries are a kind of fruit' does make sense, and this is simply because of the grammar i.e. the order in which the words are organised and the changes made to individual words. Many people are scared of grammar ... they think it's boring, too abstract or complicated, but in fact we all use grammar every day when we communicate with one another. We have to in order to get our meanings across. And children too, even as young as two, use grammar to communicate, so it can't really be that complicated. But there's another meaning of grammar too, and that's using terms to describe language patterns and their uses, for example, infinitives, past participle, tense, we use the present simple tense to talk about habitual actions in the present etc. etc., so that's the second meaning of grammar.

Now, moving on, let's look at if we all know grammar. Well, the answer is simple – we do, because we all speak to one another and all understand one another. We couldn't do that if we didn't use the same language system. In other words, we all use the same patterns in language to say what we want to communicate. 2 year olds know grammar, 10 year olds know grammar, 50 year olds know grammar. We all know grammar and use it constantly. What I mean is we know it unconsciously. What we may not know is the terms used to describe the grammar we use. It's a bit like, for instance, someone who knows how to play football but doesn't know how to explain the moves, techniques and tactics he uses to do so. Basically, all of us have an unconscious knowledge of grammar.

Exercise 4, p. 88

I'm preparing a talk to give to my classmates about our history project. The talk is on Friday and I've never given a talk to an audience before. I'm pretty nervous about it, but I'm sure they will be interested because it's a really good project. Let me tell you what it's about and maybe you can give me some help.

I've planned the first part. I am going to start with a general description of the project; you know, its aims and how we collected our data. Then I think I'll show them some PowerPoint slides of Hadrian's Wall and ask them what they know about it. Asking them questions will involve them a bit and hopefully get their interest. I expect they won't know much at all because they've been investigating other things. After that, I'll show them a picture of our project group – it's a great group and we've worked well together. I'm OK with this bit and my teacher said to use plenty of eye contact and remember my body language.

What I think I'll do next in the presentation, is tell them all about the wall – why it was built, how long it is and that kind of thing. I expect they'll enjoy that, as most of the group are interested in history. In fact, the whole class is going to go to Hadrian's wall sometime next month, so my talk will give them some background information before we go. I'm really looking forward to that trip and I'm sure we'll have a great time.

Anyway, it's not the content of the talk that worries me, it's the delivery. The thing is, my PowerPoint skills are a bit limited and as you can see, I'm never going to finish it on time at this rate. It takes me ages to put it together. You're good at PowerPoint. Do you think you can help me a bit this evening? Tell you what, I'll make you an offer. If you come round at 7 o'clock, we can work on it for an hour or so and then I'll order a pizza. Then we can relax and watch the next episode of Spooks, which starts at 9 o'clock. What do you think?

EXAM FOCUS

p. 89

Good morning, my name's Professor Andrea Hull and I'm here today to talk to you about the impact exercise has on stimulating the brain and on mental ability. In particular I want to tell you about some recent research in this area.

We've long known there was a connection between running and other aerobic exercise and brain power, but before this research we hadn't understood how or why.

Let me tell you about the research and its findings. The researchers studied two groups of mice. One of the groups had as much access to a running wheel as they wanted. The other mice formed a control group. The researchers gave all the mice a brief training session ... they put them in front of a computer screen that displayed two identical squares, side by side. If they nudged the one on the left with their nose they received some sugar as a reward. If they nudged the one on the right, they got nothing.

After they'd been trained, the mice went on to do a memory test. The more they nudged the correct square, the better they scored. At the start of the test, the squares were 30cm apart, but got closer and closer together until they were almost touching. This part of the experiment was designed to test how good the mice were at separating two very similar memories. You could think of the human equivalent as being something like a person remembering what they had for dinner yesterday and the day before, or where they parked on different trips to the supermarket.

Anyway, the running mice clocked up an average of 15 miles, 24km that is, a day, and their scores in the memory test were nearly twice as high as those of the control group, especially when the two squares were so close they nearly touched.

As you can probably imagine, at this stage of the experiment, the two memories the mice were forming of the squares were very similar. But it was when they had to distinguish between the two that these new brain cells really made a difference. What happened was that the mice that had had less exercise got steadily worse at the test because their memories became too similar to separate.

So, to sum up, what we've seen is that the group of mice that had more exercise was much better able to form distinct memories. But at this stage it wasn't clear why this was the case.

So, the researchers then did some laboratory analysis and found that brain tissue taken from the mice showed that the running mice had grown fresh grey matter during the experiment. In fact, on average there were 6,000 new brain cells in every cubic millimetre of the region of the brain linked to the formation and recollection of memories.

Right, we're running out of time, I'm afraid ... I'd better stop. If you'd like to ask me any questions about this research or read up more about it, here are some web addresses for you.

The graph shows a comparison in the use of three different types of media: radio, television and newspapers in the urban and rural areas of Liberia.

Radio is the area of media use in which there is the least difference between the urban and rural population in Liberia. 94% of the urban population and 91% of the rural population use this form of media each week. This makes it the most effective medium for reaching a wide audience in that country.

In the other areas of media use, however, there are big differences between the urban and rural populations. Almost three times as many people watch TV in cities than in a rural areas – 62% compared to 22% – and double the number – 44% compared to 22% – read newspapers.

Workbook key

On the whole, radio is the only form of media used widely by both the urban and the rural populations. TV and newspapers, although used by 62% and 44% of the urban population respectively, only have an impact on 1 in 5 of the rural population.

The bar chart shows the pattern of growth in population in Snowy River Shire County over a 23 year period from 1981 – 2004.

Between 1981 and 1986, the total number of people living in Snowy River rose slightly from 2,900 to 3,100. From 1986 to 1991, however, there was a massive increase in population. The population jumped from 3,100 to around 5,500. This upward trend continued over the next 10 years to 2001, though at a slower rate. By 2001, the population stood at 7,200, which meant the population had more than doubled in a 15 year period.

From 2001 to 2002, there was a further slight increase in the population to 7,300 but in the two years following this, the population remained stable.

On the whole, there was a dramatic rise in population of about 250% in Snowy River Shire County in the 23 year period 1981 – 2004 covered by the graph. By the end of this period, however, population figures had stabilised.

2 Possible Answers

OK, I'm going to tell you about the primary school I went to ... It's called Cloverleaf Primary School ... Everyone was made to wear a uniform, which I really didn't care for ... A typical day started at 9:05, and depending on the day of the week, we would have two or three classes before the first break, which was at 10:45 and lasted for fifteen minutes ... then we had two more lessons, for example, Literacy and Numeracy. Lunch was from 12:20 to 1:30 ... and that was followed by two more lessons, like Humanities and History. What I remember most about my primary school days is that we had to do a lot of writing in our notebooks. We didn't have netbooks to type on in school ... we wrote everything out by hand ... even research papers. If the paper assignment didn't look neat enough, the teachers would make you write it all over. Handwriting was really important. After school, we didn't run home to play video games either, we joined clubs. I was in the football club ... we had a great team and played against clubs from nearby schools ... we usually won. I was also involved in the Drama Club ... We played a lot of warm-up games. My favourite activity was called 'silent mimes' ... we'd act out things like walking a dog, juggling, or walking barefoot on hot sand, things like that. It was great fun. At the end of the year we'd put on a play ... that was my favourite part ... We did 'Charlie and the Chocolate Factory', ... 'James and the Giant Peach', ... and 'The Dracula Spectacular'. I got to play Dracula ... My parents and all of my friends said I was the best actor they'd ever seen. I think they were being too kind ... Even so, I still look back on it as one of the best experiences of my youth. My school was pretty much the same as all of the others in the country at that time. The timetables matched those of the other schools in the area ... and nearly all of the schools required students to wear uniforms.

Workbook key

5 Possible Answer

More and more communities and the children who live in them are suffering today from crimes committed by other children. Whether it is bullying, vandalism, petty theft of more serious drug – and gang-related crime, these crimes have a big impact on individuals and the communities they live in.

It is quite common nowadays – when both parents work – for children to be left unsupervised for long periods of time. It is in these hours out of school that young people with nothing to do can be drawn into crime. Boredom and not thinking about how they might hurt others are often the cause of this, and there are definitely things that parents, schools and other groups can do to work against this trend.

Children need good role models from whom they can learn values. These can be teachers, family members, or people in the community they look up to. Schools and community groups should encourage activities such as charity work, trips and sports events that bring children into contact with such role models. Through education and enjoyment of sharing things with other people, young people can be put on a path that leads them away from crime and violence.

Schools should be proactive in educating children about crime and punishment as well. Children need to understand what crime does to its victims and what could happen to them if they commit a crime. Shocking children is not necessary, but explaining the potential consequences of crime and exposing them to people who have been caught up in criminal activity can provide valuable lessons.

Such solutions, however, can only work where struggling parents can get support. Parents should try to build support networks for their children with family and friends, but support should be available through schools and community groups as well. Governments will have to spend a lot less fighting youth crime if they support youth initiatives and activities in the communities.

1 Possible Answer

In societies where there are huge differences between the rich and the poor, poverty contributes significantly to crime. The more someone feels unfairly treated or marginalised by society, the more likely they are to offend against it.

Workbook key

Poverty can lead young people to play truant and generally do less well in school. They are more likely to get into trouble seeking ways to make money or stealing things they don't have. Gang and drug culture also dominate poor areas, and young people in poverty can easily get caught up in them.

Of course, coming from a poor background does not automatically lead to crime, and very often it is the quality of parenting that will make the difference. Children are far more likely to get involved in crime when they are neglected, left unsupervised or come from homes where they are already exposed to crime.

The quality of parenting does make the greatest difference, but struggling parents in poor areas need support. Parents need the support of schools that can arrange clubs and activities after school, and the support of community groups and the police in keeping children out of gangs. There should be a special police unit that deals with youth that can advise and work with parents.

There is no magic solution to poverty, but governments must recognise it as a significant factor in youth crime. They need to make sure that in poorer communities children get opportunities to get involved in activities and projects that can make a difference in their lives. This is the support all parents need from their community.

Exam Focus

The opening section to Task 1 should be a simple description of the graph and what information it provides in general. It should not be a repetition of the original rubric, but the rubric can be re-worded.

Possible Answers

The bar chart shows the percentage of three different groups of US workers that used different modes of transport in 2009.

In the general US population, workers use their cars for almost 90% of transport activity. They use public transport for 5% and go on foot or by bike for around 4% of journeys to work. Only 3% of the total US working population work from home.

In New York State, a smaller number depend on cars to get to work – around 65 percent – and a much higher number of workers – 30 percent – use public transport.

A slightly higher number than the national average walk or bike to work: around 7%.

The figures for journeys to work in Brooklyn, however, are completely different from national trends. Sixty percent of workers use public transport whereas only 35% depend on cars to get to work. A slightly higher number of 5% walk or bike to work but surprisingly only 1% of the Brooklyn population work from home.

On the whole, the graph shows that in the metropolis of New York public transport is much more widely used for getting to work than it is throughout the US, where almost 90% of journeys to work are by car.

2 Possible Answers

- 1 F mood, dance, ability of musician
It depends on my mood. Both kinds of music have their place. Traditional music is essential for traditional dance of course. It also depends on the musicians and how they express the music.
- 2 H study, once or twice a week, weekends
Not as much as I'd like because I have to study a lot, but I always go out with my friends at least once or twice a week, usually at the weekends.
- 3 D birthdays, wedding, people's achievements
Apart from religious festivals, it's mainly anniversaries such as birthdays and wedding anniversaries or to congratulate someone on an achievement.
- 4 C quicker, not good cook
The microwave, definitely, because it makes food preparation so much quicker and I'm not such a good cook.
- 5 G convenient, quiet, late night
I can't stand shopping so if I have to go I go wherever it's most convenient and quiet. For example, we have supermarkets that are open 24 hours so go late at night when there are very few people there.
- 6 B work, free time
Twenty-four seven, because I'm working on it all day and in my free time I use the computer a lot.
- 7 E no email, Gran
Not really. I only write to people who don't have email, like my grandmother.
- 8 A not permanently
I hope to study abroad, so I will live abroad then. But I don't want to live abroad permanently.
- 9 J DVDs
It used to be more popular, but nowadays many people watch DVDs at home.
- 10 I try new things
Something completely different from my everyday routine. I like to see new places and try new activities.

- 1 Cheap pre-paid phones that get rid of your monthly bills are very popular in my country and with people my age because people only spend what they can afford on calls and cannot run up huge bills. Many parents like their children to have these phones so they appreciate the cost of using mobile phones.

Two years ago it was my mother's birthday and Dad bought tickets for us to go and see Sleeping Beauty at the Royal Opera House in London. Before the performance we had dinner in the Royal Opera House restaurant. It was a very elegant setting and the food was delicious.

The ballet itself was magical. We had seats close to the front and we had an amazing view of the dancers. The orchestra was fantastic and the combination of beautiful music by Tchaikovsky and the excellent choreography were spell binding. The props were impressive and the costumes were elaborate.

I will never forget Mum's special birthday treat and the look on her face when our evening at the Royal Opera House was over. She looked so happy. The three of us had a wonderful time and when we walked out into the street it was almost as if we had all shared the same dream. We still often talk about it.

The whole occasion was a fantastic evening.

 The world's population, now 5300 million, is increasing by 250000 people everyday. Not so long ago, in 1984, it seemed as if the rate of population growth was slowing everywhere except in Africa and parts of southern Asia. Today, the situation looks less promising since progress made towards slowing birth rates has been slower than expected. It is estimated that 1000 million people will be born during this decade. By and large, the increases will occur in the poorest countries – those societies least equipped to meet the needs of the new arrivals and invest in their future.

 Women rarely participate other than in limited ways in shaping their countries' economic and social policies. Their place in managing resources and crop production has yet to be recognised by most governments.

Workbook key

Overall, women are responsible for half the food production in developing countries.

The time and energy required of women for cultivating and harvesting, food processing and preparation as well as fetching of fuel are not mentioned in national labour statistics.

Successful policies will secure women's involvement from the beginning and will also make sure that development does not simply mean more work for them.

3 Possible Answers

- 1 The most serious social issue facing my country is unemployment. Many young people entering the job market are unable to find work. Whether they are university graduates or not, it seems the situation is the same for all of them and competition for jobs is fierce. The problem is affecting all age groups though and this is having a negative effect on families all over the country who are experiencing financial difficulties. The knock-on effects of unemployment are serious and at worst lead to mental health problems, family breakdowns and drug abuse. Unemployment is a huge challenge for the government to address and it is hoped that policies can be introduced to revive the economy and generate more jobs.
- 2 The most pressing environmental concern in my country is air pollution especially in big cities. This is a big problem for people's health. More and more people are suffering from breathing problems such as asthma and the elderly, infants and young children are most at risk. High levels of air pollution are also contributing to global warming and climate change. There are laws that set out what air quality levels must be. The causes of pollution must be identified and solutions must be found to this serious environmental problem.

Grammar Focus

- 1 There are many reasons why people are moving from rural to urban areas. The main reason, however, in the developing world is the desire to escape the poverty that/which exists outside of cities. Rural communities which are lacking basic services are hard places to live especially for young people whose prospects are few. It is these young people who head for cities often hoping to make money that they can send back home.
The problem is that very often the city lights which shine from a distance hide the overcrowded slums where/in which these young people will have to live. Young people who have only ever known rural life will almost certainly meet criminal elements who/that are keen to exploit them. These young people whose lives were probably once similar to the lives of the young people that they are now threatening and exploiting, just make the problem worse. They open the door of the city just wide enough to let them in and then trap them inside lives that destroy their dreams.

2 Possible Answer

The planet is in crisis. Global warming threatens the planet and every day we destroy ecosystems and lose natural resources that we will never get back. Consumerism in the developed world and poverty in the developing world are driving this destruction which must be reversed – whatever it takes.

Industrialisation and the use of petro-chemicals for making products and for transportation has led to global warming. The destruction of forests in the developing world has only made matters worse. The same process that led to the crisis: mankind's ability to invent things and desire for progress – can also help to reverse it. Technology, which for years has been dirty and wasteful, must now become clean and smart. Governments must set smart standards in everything from transportation to food production so that we encourage the use of renewable resources and clean technology.

One thing that has been obvious for a long time is that societies need to move from petrol to electric cars. Governments have not done enough to make this happen more quickly. This technology which could help slow global warming dramatically must receive massive government investment.

Another priority should also be making homes efficient in terms of the energy they use. There are all sorts of gadgets that can now be built into homes to save energy. There are also devices which can produce and store natural energy such as solar energy. Governments must insist that homes are built this way in the future.

It will be neither governments nor technology alone that save us in the future. It will have to be both. Governments must act to make clean and smart technology pay. If it pays, it will get invented.

Mission IELTS WORKBOOK

Mission IELTS 1 Academic is the first in a two-course book series which aims to help students to achieve their potential for success in the IELTS exam. Each of its thematic units aims to develop the core language and skills needed for success in one of the IELTS papers. Its innovative unit structure enables the user to focus in-depth on language and skills to improve performance in the different sections of each paper and provides thorough exam awareness training and practice for the different tasks in these papers. The series is complete with a General Training course supplement and Workbook.

Key Features

- a range of vocabulary, skills and grammar tasks directly supporting work covered in each SB section
- further targeted exam practice in all skills areas
- comprehensive answer keys to support self-study goals
- full tapescripts for all Listening and some Speaking tasks
